HUGHES ACCEPTS THE REPUBLICAN NOMINATION

Tenders Resignation as Associate Justice of U. S. Supreme Court

ROOSEVELT NOMINATED; DECLINES FOR PRESENT

WASHINGTON, D. C.

HUGHES' NOMINATION BY THE REPUBLICANS MADE ON 3RD BALLOT

Landslide of Votes Go to Him as the Names of the "Favorite Son" Candidates Are Withdrawn—Charles Warren Fairbanks, of Indiana, Was Named as the Candidate for Vice-President—The Convention Adjourns Sine Die.

ROOSEVELT NOMINATED BY PROGRESSIVTS, WITH JOHN M. PARKER, OF LOUISIANA, HIS RUNNING MATE

Eventual Withdrawal of the Progressive Ticket is Believed by the Politically Wise to be a Probability, Because of the Provisional Declination of Colonel Roosevelt to Accept—Leaders Believe That Harmony May Yet be Reached.

Chicago, June 8. — The Republican National Convention today nominated Charles Evans Hughes, of New York, and Charles Warren Fairbanks, of Indiana, as the candidates of their party for president and vice-president.

Almost at the same moment, Theodore Roosevelt was nominated by the Progressive Convention, and late in the day John M. Parker, of Louisiana, was named as his running mate.

The Republican nomination required a ballot, the third of t he convention, while the Progressive nomination was made by acclamation.

Chance to Withdraw Third Ticket.

Mr. Roosevelt's provisional declination to accept the Progressive nomination is believed by the politically wise to leave the door ajar if not wide open for eventual withdrawal of the third ticket, in the event Mr. Hughes' position on what the Progressives feel to be the vital issues of the campaign meet their approval. To this extent, at least, the leaders in both parties feel that the efforts at harmony, even if not directly fruitful of result, may yet be realized.

CONVENTION MAKES BOTH OF THE NOMINATIONS UNANIMOUS

Chicago, June 10.—Charles Evans Hughes, former governor of New York and Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, was nominated today for the presidency by the Republican National Convention. Charles Warren Fairbanks, of Indiana, elected vice president with Theodore Roosevelt in 1904, again was chosen for second place.

Both nominations, made by overwhelming majorities on the first ballot of the day—the third ballot of the convention for the presidency—were by acclamation made unanimous.

Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, presented by Colonel Roosevelt as a compromise candidate, received seven votes. Colonel Roosevelt himself received 18 and one half, scattered over 12 states.

The nominating ballot showed this count:

The Nominating Ballot.

Hughes, 949 1-2; Roosevelt, 18 1-2; Lodge, 7; DuPont 7; Weeks 3; LaFollette 3; Absent 1—Total 987.

Although Frank H. Hitchcock let it be known that the Hughes men wanted Burton for second place, Ohio withdrew Burton's name, leaving the field to Mr. Fairbanks and former Senator Burkett, of Nebraska.

The ballot for vice president showed this count:

Fairbanks, 863; Burkett 108; Borah 8; Burton 1; Johnson 1; Absent, scattering, and not voting 6—Total 987.

Mr. Hughes will be notified officially at a date to be fixed later by a committee headed by Senator Harding, chairman of the convention.

Mr. Fairbanks will be notified by a committee headed by Senator Borah.

Expression of Harmony.

At 2:01 P. M. the convention adjourned. There were expressions of harmony from all the leaders and among the delegates. The delegations, which on the final ballot had cast votes for others than Mr. Hughes, made statements declaring their loyalty to the nominees.

"Six months ago," said Chairman Hilles, of the National Committee, "I said the nominee would be born in the convention. And he was."

"I am very much pleased, of course," said Mr. Hitchcock. "It means a reunited Republican party and victory in November."

The nomination of Mr. Hughes was made possible so soon by an over-night break up of the allied favorite sons' combination, which early this morning released its delegates, practically all of whom were known to favor Mr. Hughes when freed from their instructions.

When the convention began business shortly before noon the withdrawal of the favorite sons was announced one after another and the votes began flopping into the Hughes column blocks so rapidly that the nomination plainly was assured before the roll call had gone five states. When it got to Colorado the drift was so apparent that a proposal to make it unanimous was made, but Chairman Harding ruled that the balloting should take its regular course.

Yells of Exultation.

Each addition to the Hughes column was greeted by yells of exultation from the rapidly accumulating Hughes delegates and steadily state by state the votes piled up until New Jersey carried it past the required 494 and the remainder was only a formality.

In rapid succession as the voting went on DuPont was withdrawn by Delaware and his solid block was cast for Hughes. Illinois withdrew Sherman, Ohio withdrew Burton, Iowa withdrew Cummins, New York withdrew Root, Massachusetts withdrew Weeks.

Practically all these new votes were cast for Hughes, only a few remaining in compliment to the favorite sons who brought them.

Then one after the other, Senator Weeks and Senator Lodge took the platform, pledged loyalty to the nominee and asked all their supporters to do likewise. Similar announcements were made from all the favorite son delegations. The final analysis of the nominating ballot showed that Hughes had drawn his votes from every state and every territory; that Roosevelt's had been scattered over 12 states; that DuPont's five had come from South Carolina; Lodge's seven from North Carolina and the final three for Senator Weeks had come from Massachusetts and Missouri.

Accept After Adjournment.

Although the convention when it nominated Mr. Hughes had no word that he would accept and no statement of his position, one came along soon afterward, but not until the convention had adjourned. The former Justice had kept to his determination to utter no word in his own behalf, to make no new announcement of his position on issues and to say nothing which might be construed as becoming a candidate while he wore the robe of a Justice in the world's greatest court.

Before the ballot was taken today Senator Smoot ,of Utah, announced the report of the latest meeting of the Republican conferees with the conferees of the Progressive convention, disclosing that the Republicans had presented the name of Mr. Hughes for their consideration as a candidate on whom both convention could unite. He also read the reply of the Progressive conferees which merely was an acknowledgement of receipt of the proposal. Then he read Colonel Roosevelt's telegram to the Progressive convention, which had been brought to the Coliseum by John McGrath, the Colonel's secretary, suggesting Senator Lodge.

Republican Proposal Tabled.

Before he had finished the reading word came and was announced in the Coliseum that the Progressive convention itself had not only tabled the Republican proposal of Mr. Hughes but had tabled Colonel Roosevelt's own proposal of Senator Lodge as well. No one in the Republican convention really expected Colonel Roosevelt's compromise to be accepted, neither did they feel the Pressives would accept Mr. Hughes.

There was a gallery demonstration at the announcement of Colonel Roosevelt's proposition, but the delegate section, by its silence plainly showed its indifferento and if any of the Republican managers entertained the least fear of a stampede to Colonel Roosevelt, it was dissipated by every outward indication that about the only message from Colonel Roosevelt that could have aroused the delegates to enthusiasm would have been his acceptance of Hughes. With that the roll call of states began and there

COMPLETES DRAFT OF THE PLATFORM

President Remained at the White House Throughout Day—Reviewed Convention Reports.

CONFERS WITH LEADERS

Trend of His Campaign Speeches May Be Indicated by Addresses He Will Deliver on Next Tuesday and Wednesday.

Washington, June 10.—President Wilson remained in the White House throughout today receiving reports on the Republican and Progressive conventions, putting the finishing touches on his draft of the Democratic platform and conferring with Democrattic leaders. His only direct connection with the day's politecal developments was his receipt and acceptance of Justice Hughes' resignation from the Supreme Court.

The President's closest advisers did not expect Colonel Roosevelt to be a candidate on the Progressive ticket, but made no secret of their hope that he might.

The trend of the President's campaign speeches probably will be indicated in addresses he will deliver Tuesday at the West Point graduation exercises, and Wednesday at a flag da celebration following a preparedness parade here. Administration leaders said tonight that they expected the Graham Has Good Majority for Commissioner of Agriculture.

State Board of Elections Has Canvassed Vote for State Officers From All Except Tyrrell and Pamlico —The Figures.

(Special Star Telegram.)

Raleigh, N. C., June 10.—In finishing u ptotals of the State ticket vote for the State-wide primary tonight, the State Board of Elections found the following correct with the Pamlico and the Tyrrell county official returns left out, not being yet in hand:

Governor, Bickett 63,722; Daughtridge 36,017.

Commissioner of Agriculture, Graham 49,943; McKinnon 33,543; Hobbs 11,019.

Corporation Commissioner, Lee 66,-222; Boyd 27,510.

Commissioner of Insurance, Young 69,673; McCleneghan 2,297.

Secretary of State, Grimes 53,547; Hartness 27,235; Clark 16,193.

State treasurer, Lacy 59,795; Mann 34,568.

Commissioner of Labor and Printing, Shipman 62,558; Dellinger 25,446.

Attorney General, Calvert 12,787; Sinclair 17,966; Jones 18, 854; Manning 43,090.

It was stated today at the office of the State Board of Elections that while the board will officially notify Judge Manning and Edmund Jones that they have a second primary coming to them if it is demanded, there is every indication that Mr. Jones will concede the nomination to Judge Manning, who accepted the Jones proposition that the candidate receiving the highest vote be declared the nominee without regard to whether he had an actual majority vote or not. The fact is Judge Manning lacks less than 600 votes of having two and one-half times as many votes in the primary as Mr. Jones, who is his closest competitor.

WILSON ACCEPTS RESIGNATION OF JUSTICE HUGHES

Associate Justice Sends Telegram to Chairman Harding, Accepting Nomination.

DIDN'T DESIRE IT, HE SAYS

Denounces Administration's Foreign Policies — Declares for "Thoroughbred Americanism."

Washington, June 10.—Charles Evans Hughes stepped down today from the Supreme bench, and accepted the Republican nomination for President. In a telegram denouncing the administration's foreign policies and declaring for a "dominant, thorough-going Americanism," he gave his decision to Chairman Harding, of the Republican National Convention, and broke the long silence which had kept the leaders of his party in the dark as to his attitude on what they termed the great issues of the day.

"I have not desired the nomination," the telegram said, "I have wished to remain on the bench. But in this critical period of our national history I recognize that it is your right to summon and that it is my paramount duty to respond."

Accepts Within An Hour.

Within an hour after Chairman Harding had notified him of his nomination, Mr. Hughes had accepted the call. His resignation, a scant two-line letter without a superfluous word, was on its way to the White House from the Hughes home before the nominee had dispatched the message of acceptance, and called the waiting group of newspaper men into his study to tell them of his decision. President Wilson accepted the resignation in a reply almost as brief.

"I hereby resign the office of Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States," Mr. Hughes wrote. To which the President replied, "I am in receipt of your letter of resignation and feel constrained to yield to your desire. I, therefore, accept your resignation as Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States to take effect at once."

Learns of Roosevelt's Action.

After copies of both the telegram to Chicago and the letter of resignation had been made public Mr. Hughes left his home for his customaary afternoon walk. Soon after his return Lawrence Green, his private secretary, told him of Colonel Roosevelt's conditional declination of the Progressive nomination.

Mr. Hughes sent word to inquirers that he had nothing to say concerning it. His friends, however, were outspoken in their satisfaction over Colonel Roosevelt's attitude.

No plans have been made by the nominee for the summer. The family had practically dismantled the 16th street residence here, intending to return to Maine for the hot months, but those plans have been abandoned. Whether Mr. Hughes will go on the stump or whether he will select to manage his campaign are questions that have not been considered so far.

Events transpired with dramatic suddenness at the Hughes home today as a climax to monotonous weeks of waiting. It has been thought that things would move swiftly, but few of the candidate's closest friends believed that the day's developments would crowd his resignation from the bench, his acceptance of the nomination and his declaration of principles into the space of little more than an hour.

Nomination Unexpected.

Throughout the pre-convention campaign Justice Hughes had insisted that he would not be nominated. Not until last night after the balloting began did he admit to his intimates that he might be drafted to lead his party. Even the statement as to what action he would take was interpreted as meaning he would accept, certainly if the action of the convention were practically unanimous.

As the balloting was resumed today the Hughes household went along almost as usual. Only the Justice had abandoned his office on the first floor and retired to the privacy of the third floor, with Mrs. Hughes and their little daughter, Elizabeth. The eldest daughter, Miss Catherine had gone to take a lesson from a tutor and Miss Helen was in New York preparatory to leaving on a Y. W. C. A. camping trip. The only son, Charles E. Hughes, Jr., a lawyer in New York City, was at the Plattsburg military camp.

There was no news from Chicago except such as filtered in with the arrival of newspaper men or was telephoned by local newspaper offices. Even as to that Mr. Hughes left word with his secretary that he did not care to be informed of the vote by states, but wanted only the summary.

Before the balloting began, telegrams began to arrive predicting the

RUSSIANS KEEPING UP THEIR ADVANCE

AUSTRIAN LINES STIFFENED

Defense Appears Stronger Northeast of Tarnopol — Germans Announce Further Progress Northeast of Verdun.

The Russian offensive in Volhynia and Galicia is daily assuming new phases and marking new ground won by General Brusiloff's troops. The Russians are continuing to push westward from Lutsk after crossing the river Styr fighting rear guard actions with the Austrians as they retire. In Galicia, northeast of Tarnopol, the Austrian defense appears to be stiffening heavy fighting being reported there for heights which have changed hands several times. Further south the Russians are nearing the Zlota Lipa river from which the Russians advanced in their drive of last September.

At Verdun the German war office announces further progress northeast of the fortress, where ground has been gained southwest at Fort Douaumont and west of Fort Vaux. In taking a field work in the latter sector, more than 500 men and 22 machine guns were captured by the Germans, who announce that since June 8 their captures have totalled more than 1,500 men.

SITUATION IN MEXICO CAUSING UNEASINESS

Extent of Anti-American Agitation Not Yet Determined

Officials Believe It Possible Definite Campaign Has Been Inaugurated to Provoke Armed Clash With American Forces.

Washington, June 10.—Administration officials have been unable as yet to determine the extent of the anti-American agitation in Northern Mexico but they are making n oeffort to conceal their uneasiness. The demonstrations against retention of American troops in Mexico have been widely separated geographically but have occurred, some officials think, with significantly close relation to each other in time. They believe it possible a definite campaign has been inaugurated by some agency to provoke an armed clash between American and Mexican forces. It is not known, however, that any definite indication of such an organized movement has been received.

The State Department had no confirmation tonight of current rumors that the American consulate at Durango had been burned or that General Pershing forces had been attacked near Namiquipa.

The Carranza government is facing renewed disorders in the South, along the line of the Teruantepec railway today's advices said. Rebels are reported to have captured- Tehuantepec and to be moving on Salina Cruz, the road's Pacific terminal. In Northern Mexico the bandit leader DeLaRosa is said to be active in the region of Mazatlan. Since the last word of this leader placed him near the border, officials are at a loss to account of his reported activities in the west coast territory.

Secretary Lansing said the disturbances so far had not been called to General Carranza's attention. Officials generally think the present state of affairs will be set forth in the note being prepared in reply to General Carranza's recent communication demanding the withdrawal of troops from Mexico.

Washington, June 10.—Ambassador Gerard at Berlin cabled the State Department today admitting the authenticity of an interview with him on peace, published by a Munich newspaper two weeks ago, but denouncing as spurious a somewhat similar statement credited to him by the Berlin Evening National Zeitung, June 3.

ROOSEVELT DECLINES FOR TIME BEING TO ACCEPT NOMINATION

DELEGATES BEGIN TO ARRIVE SLOWLY

Advance Guard Reached St. Louis Last Night to Attend the Democratic Convention.

ONLY VERY FEW CONTESTS

Nomination of Wilson and Marshall is Expected Late Friday Night or Early Saturday Morning Without a Hitch.

St. Louis, June 10.—The advance guard of delegates arrived in scattered groups from Michigan and Illinois tonight for the Democratic convention to be held here next week, and their number will be augmented tomorrow by others from all over the country.

Interest centered tonight on the nominations made at Chicago and what effect they would have in the campaign. National Chairman McCombs said that no matter what slate had been selected in Chicago by either of the parties it would not affect the plan of the Democrats to renominate President Wilson and Vice President Marshall.

Smooth Sessions Expected.

The naming of Wilson and Marshall after the 1,092 delegates have adopted a platform which, in the main, has been sketched by President Wilson, is expected to be carried through without a hitch late Friday night or early Saturday morning.

The names of several candidates besides that of Mr. Marshall may be presented in convention for vice president, but these are expected to be withdrawn before the first roll call has been concluded. Governor Major ,of Missouri, is a candidate for vice-president and reports are current that Governor Morehead, of Nebraska, and Senator Owen, of Oklahoma, will be placed in nomination.

"There is not a storm cloud in sight," Chairman McCombs said tonight. There may be one or two contests from Hawaii, District of Columbia, and other remote territories, but these will be easily settled by the national committee when it meets next Monday.

The national committee has before it a contest from Texas in which a lively fight is promised. Thomas Love, formerly of Missouri, is contesting the election of Mr. Poindexter, a national committeeman.

Telephone to White House.

A private telephone wire has been installed between the White House and the headquarters of the National Committee here and President Wilson will be constantly informed of every move until the convention closes.

The national committeemen here are eagerly awaiting the suggestion from President Wilson as to whom he would like to have named as chairman of the National Committee. If the President names a member of the committee it is reported here that Homer Cummings of Connecticut will be the man, though Chairman McCombs said tonight that no intimation had been made by President Wilson as to his choice for the campaign leader.

The vanguard of the Illinois delegation, which arrived here 100 strong, including 30 judges of the circuit, superior, and municipal courts of Chicago and Cook county, declared themselves "one hundred per cent. for Roger Sullivan, for vice president."

Suffragettes There.

The suffrage squad headed by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt also is on hand. The delegation said Mrs. Catt, will ask the Democratic convention to include a suffrage plank in its platform without an amendment regarding states rights, such as was contained in the suffrage plank adopted by the Republican convention. On Wednesday, the suffrage organizations, of St. Louis and Missouri, with members of the executive board of the national suffrage organization will hold a walkless, talkless demonstration on the principal streets leading to the Coliseum, where the convention is to be held.

On Monday the National Committee will consider the contest involving William Poindexter, a national committeeman from Texas to succeed Cato Sels, and John F. Costello, as national committeeman from the District of Columbia.

Whether or Not He Will Run Will Depend Upon Issues Adopted by Justice Hughes.

COMMITTEE IS TO DECIDE

Message From Oyster Bay Meets With No Protest in the Progressive Convention.

IS A BURST OF APPLAUSE

Pandemonium Precedes Choice by Acclamation.

Chicago, June 10. — The Progressive National Convention, after four days' tumult with but one purpose, today nominated Colonel Theodore Roosevelt for president, and a few hours later listened, without protest, to a message from Oyster Bay that he would not accept "at this time." The convention adjourned at 4:58 P. M.

Colonel Roosevelt's declination was conditional, and it was placed in the hands of the Progressive committee to be held until such time as statements of Justice Hughes, the nominee of the Republican party, "shall satisfy the committee that it is for the interest of the country that he be elected."

Committee to Decide.

In the event the committee shall be satisfied that aid should be given to the Republican party in its fight against the Democrats, Colonel Roosevelt's refusal to make a campaign is to be considered final. It will then be authorized for the representatives of the Progressive party to say whether to endorse the position taken by Mr. Roosevelt or whether they will name another to fight for their party principles.

Capt. John M. Parker, of Louisiana, was nominated for vice president, the selection being by acclamation.

Colonel Roosevelt's running mate of four years ago, Governor Johnson, of California, refused to let his name be placed before the convention because of the information he had concerning the intentions of Colonel Roosevelt toward his nomination.

Message Calmly Received.

Chairman Robins carefully emphasized the Colonel's statement that he could not accept the nomination "at this time."

In profound calm the brief message was quickly read. The proposal to have the National Committee decide the question involved met bitter silence. At the conclusion there was a burst of applause, but of no great duration of extreme intensity.

James R. Garfield moved that the convention accept Colonel Roosevelt's proposals and refer them to the National Committee with power to act.

Chairman Robins hurriedly put the question. A substantial vote of "ayes" followed, in a faint scattering of "noes." In the confusion that followed, as the delegates began to leave their seats, and rush for the exits the motion adopted to adjourn was muffled in a noisy turmoil.

Excitedly discussing the dramatic denoument of the tumultuous political battle and its possible effects on the political history, particularly of the Progressive party, the delegates departed with the last words of Colonel Roosevelt and stirring patriotic airs by the band, blended in their ears.

Report on Peace Conference.

Soon after the convention met, while delegates were clamoring to nominate, Chairman George W. Perkins, of the conference committee, made his report. He recited last night's meeting, stating that the Progressives were again asked for their second choice candidate.

He said that the same arguments for Roosevelt were advanced while the Republicans asked that the Progressive convention join in a statement for Justice Hughes. Mr. Perkins said the Progressives laid the situation before Colonel Roosevelt this morning.

A telegram from Colonel Roosevelt to the Progressive conferees was then read. It recited how the Republicans had asked for a second choice selection from the Progressives.

"For months I have thought of this matter," Colonel Roosevelt said, declaring it was imperative to sink "all

CAPTAIN TELLS OF HIS SHIP'S ESCAPE

Additional Proof That the Dreadnaught Warspite Was Not Sunk by the Germans.

RETURNED SAFELY TO PORT

Captain Phillpots Says He is Still Commander of the World's Greatest Warship—Associated Press Gets Interview.

London, June 10.—In proof of the statement of the British Admiralty that the dreadnaught Warspite arrived safely in port, after the North Sea battle, the commander of the warship himself received an Associated Press correspondent today and described his vessel's "miraculous escape" from the concentrated German fire.

"I am still commander of the greatest battleship in the world, and my men are as fine as Nelson's blue jackets," said this officer, Capt. E. M. Philipotts. The captain granted the interview on his return from Buckingham palace where he told King George the story of his part in the great naval battle.

Praises His Men.

Captain Philipotts minimized his own part in the battle but was full of praise for his men and what he termed the amazing powers of resistance of his ship.

"I am not surprised that the Germans report that the Warspite was sunk," he said, "as from our position between our fleet and the German battleships, our escape from such a fate was simply miraculous. Several times we disappeared from sight in the smoke and spray. Even some of our own officers on other ships believed the gallant battleship had sunk. As we left the fighting line, we disappeared in a complete veil of spray.

"The division of battleships of which the Warspite was one, was with the battle cruisers. We were practically engaged as soon as they were, but the Warspite did not fire until a few minutes after the others had been in action, as I was not satisfied with the range at first.

"We soon knew we were up against the whole German battle fleet but it was our business to engage them as fully as possible until Admiral Jellico could come up.

Made Hit After Hit.

"You ask me what result I saw that our fire had on the Germans, but it is quite impossible to give a definite reply, as the captain of one of a row of battleships, about 500 yards apart steaming in battle line must keep an eye on the ship to make necessary swerves. The flag captain has some chance to see with some degree of accuracy what damage has been done to the enemy, but the others are too busy keeping their places in line and doing the damage, to keep a glass to the eye to see what is suffering.

"However, I saw that we registered hit after hit, enough to convince me that the Germans got a hiding which will keep them in port for many months to come. After two hours of action, in much of which our division of battleships engaged the whole German battle fleet in an effort to protect our battle cruisers until Admiral Jellicoe came up, the Warspite steering gear went wrong and she ran amuck among the enemy."

never was a moment's doubt of the result.

Fairbanks Nominated.

With the end of the balloting for the presidential nomination and the official announcement the balloting for vice president began. There was some surprise when Governor Willis, of Ohio, withdrew Burton's name, and cast the whole block of Ohio votes for Faairbanks.

At the roll call proceeded whole blocks of votes piled in for Fairbandks and his nomination was such a foregone conclusion that the delegates began leaving and caused much confusion that the balloting was heard with difficulty.

After Chairman Harding had officially announced the nomination of Fairbanks, the usual resolutions were passed, Chairman Hilles called a meeting of the new national committee for organization and the convention adjourned.

Notable in Political History.

The convention was notable in political history for many things. A man who steadfastly had refused to seek the nomination had been chosen; it was the first Republican convention since 1888 which had been forced to take more than one ballot to agree upon a candidate and it had been marked by a lack of riotous demonstration and nervous enthusiasm which hitherto has been a feature of such gatherings. It did not touch any of the existing records for sustained demonstrations, but, despite the fact that it was wholly and decidedly "unbossed" it moved with a precision and quietness which has not been equalled since the McKinley convention in Philadelphia.

ROOSEVELT REFUSES TO COMMENT ON THE STATEMENT

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 10.—When Colonel Roosevelt summoned the newspaper correspondents to Sagamore Hill at 6 o'clock tonight to tell them he had tentatively refused the Progressive nomination, he had nothing to add to what he had said in his telegram to the convention at Chicago.

He told something, however, of the steps which led up to his message early in the day, suggesting that Progressives and Republicans unite upon Senator Lodge as a compromise candidate. At 4 o'clock this morning, he said, one Republican and two Progressive conferees called him over the telephone to explain the situation.

Colonel Roosevelt informed them, he declared, that he intended to suggest the joint nomination of Senator Lodge All three conferees, he said, seemed to be agreed that such a step would be satisfactory. He declined to name the Republican member other than to say he had been a supporter of Justice Hughes.

Colonel Roosevelt sent his telegram of refusal before he had read Justice Hughes' statement. Later, when asked if he had any comment to make on the Hughes statement, he replied: "Not a word, not a word about anything."

Colonel Roosevelt said he probably would have no further statement to make until after the progressive National Committee gets together to determine its attitude in regard to Justice Hughes' candidacy or learns something further in regard to the Republican nominees' positions on the questions Colonel Roosevelt considers the most important now before the country.

The Colonel Roosevelt was asked by a photographer to step out on the lawn "No picture," the Colonel stated emphatically, "I am out of politics."

FAIRBANKS MAKES STATEMENT ACCEPTING THE NOMINATION

Indianapolis, June 10.—Charles Warren Fairbanks, in a statement given out here tonight, accepted the Republican nomination for vice president. His statement follows:

"I was not a candidate for the vice presidential nomination and requested the chairman of the Indiana delegation to withdraw my name if presented. The nomination was made and the convention adjourned before my dispatch was received. I feel it my duty, under the circumstances, to accept the commission which the party has so generously and unanimously placed in my hands."

COMMITTEEMEN INSTRUCTED NOT TO ENDORSE HUGHES

Chicago, June 10. — The Virginia delegation to the National Progressive convention tonight voted to instruct its National Committeeman to work for the substitution of Governor Johnson, Victor Murdock, or some other capable man for Theodore Roosevelt, in case the Colonel decides not to make the race on the Progressive ticket for president.

The resolutions adopted also forbade the Virginia National Committeeman from endorsing the Republican candidate for President. It was reported at the meeting that other Southern state delegations and probably Northern and Western states might alos take similar action.

GERMAN-AMERICAN ALLIANCE HAS BEEN WORKING FOR HUGHES

Chicago, June 10.—Louis E. Brandt, secretary of the German-American Alliance of Illinois, tonight issued a statement saying that the members of the alliance had exerted their first political activity in working for the nomination of Charles E. Hughes for president. The statement said that the campaign for Hughes was planned six months ago and crystalized at a meeting of representatives of the alliance from all over the country in Chicago a week ago.

A meeting of the political committee of the German-American Alliance will be held in Chicago on Wednesday to promulgate further plans.

Mr. Brandt's statement said that letters from the alliance were already going in the mails calling on 3,000,000 members to vote for Mr. Hughes.

SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF CHARLES EVANS HUGHES

Charles Evans Hughes was born in Glens Falls, N. Y., April 11, 1862, making him four years younger than ex-President Roosevelt and six years younger than President Wilson.

His father was a Baptist minister, and his mother shaped his early education with the idea of preparing him for the ministry. The family moved to Newark, N. J., when he was a boy, and during his young manhood it settled in New York city. At the age of 15 he was graduated from a New York high school at the head of his class, so young that his father would not permit him to enter college for a year. He was graduated from Brown University in 1881, one of the five Phi Beta Kappa honor men of his year, and attended the Columbia University law school, holding the prize fellowship from 1884 to 1887.

At the beginning of his career, Mr. Hughes was an instructor in Greek and mathematics at an academy in Delhi, N. Y. A chiding remark from the principal of that academy to the effect that young Hughes would have trouble controlling the discipline of his classes, because he had "no more beard than an egg," is cited in innumerable biographical records of Mr. Hughes as having been responsible for the Hughes beard, which has since figured so largely in political caricatures.

After a short experience as an educator, Mr. Hughes became a law clerk in the office of Stewart L. Woodford, later was elected lieutenant governor or the state of New York, but his health was undermined by his work and he accepted a chair as professor of law at Cornell University. Two years later, however, he was back practicing law in New York.

The public first heard of Mr. Hughes in 1905 and 1906. It was in those years that he served first as counsel for the Stevens legislative committee investigating the gas companies of New York, and then as counsel for the Armstrong executive committee for the investigation of insurance business in New York. In the first investigation, Mr. Hughes made a reputation, but it attracted little attention outside of New York city. In the insurance investigation, however, he unearthed nation-wide scandals, and the whole country followed the dramatic story which he revealed. Before his investigation was half finished, however, Republican leaders seized upon the record which he had made to carry their party to victory. He declined the New York city Republican nomination for mayor because he had not finished the insurance investigation.

The next year he was elected governor, defeating W. R. Hearst, nominee of both the Democrats and the Independent League. Mr. Hughes was the only successful Republican on the state ticket.

Throughout his administration as governor, he was at loggerheads with the Republican organization. He first urged the passage of the public service commission law, to which the legislature paid little attention. He stumped the state for his bill, and finally the legislature responded.

Hardly had the bill become a law before the legislature passed a two-cent passenger fare measure. Governor Hughes vetoed it on the ground that a legislature should not deal arbitrarily with matters requiring investigation, particularly when it had just provided machinery for investigating such matters. He also succeeded in having a measure against race track betting enacted, affecting racing throughout the whole country.

Governor Hughes was considered prominently for the Republican presidential nomination in 1908. President Roosevelt threw his power in favor of Mr. Taft, and Governor Hughes was re-elected. He achieved widespread reputation as a campaign speaker by opening the Republican campaign at Youngstown, Ohio. It was during his second term in 1910 that President Taft appointed him to the Supreme Court bench.

As a member of the court, he wrote many of the most important decisions rendered by the court. Among these were the so-called state rate cases, the pure food law decision, and the Virginia-West Virginia debt case.

Mr. Hughes was married in New York city, December 5th, 1888, to Antoinette, daughter of Walter S. Carter, and had four children—Charles Evans Hughes, Jr., Helen, Catherine and Elizabeth Hughes.

He was for several years president of the Brown University Club, of New York, a trustee of the Fifth Baptist church in New York.

He is a member of the Lawyers', Republican, University, Union League and Cornell University clubs, and the American, State and New York bar associations.

Though in official life Mr. Hughes has been known as a hard worker, in private life he is buoyant, fond of books of all kinds, music and golf, besides being a mountain climber who has been over most of Switzerland on foot.

DENIES BROTHERHOOD MEMBERS HAVE INTERRUPTED TRAFFIC

Reports Emanating From Washington efuted by A B Garretson.

New York, June 10.—eports that railway brotherhood members had caused interruptions in traffic pending the result of wage negotiations in this city between representatives of the railroads of the country and the employes were denied today by A. B. Garretson, president of the Order of Railway Conductors, spokesman for the men in the conference. The reports which emanated from Washington said that the national chamber of commerce would ask an Interstate Commerce Commission investigation of certain interruptions in railroad traffic at present.

ITALIAN TRANSPORT SUNK.

Torpedoed by Austrian Submarine —Large Number Soldiers Lost.

Rome, (via Paris), June 10.—The Italian transport Principe Umberto has been torpedoed and sunk in the lower Adriatic with a loss of a large number soldiers, according to an official statement issued by th eadmiralty today.

The steamer, accompanied by two other transports and escorted by destroyers, was attacked by two Austrians submarines and although prompt help was rendered by the other ships it is believed half the troops on board have perished. The exact loss has not yet been established.

London, June 10.—The British cruiser Hampshire, on which Field Marshal Earl Kitchener and members of his staff were lost, was sunk as the result of striking a mine, it was officially announced this afternoon. All hope has been abandoned for all save the 12 men from the Hampshire who were washed ashore on a raft, the statement says.

DELEGATES ARE GIVEN SAIL ON NEUSE RIVER

THE CONQUERING MOTOR

World Seems to Be Fast Outgrowing the Draft Horse.

(Fro mthe Chicago Journal.)

It takes at least five years to breed and raise a first-class work horse. It takes—well, a good deal less time—to make a motortruck or tractor that will do the work of many horses. This is one of the several reasons why there is going to be a big increase of motor transportation, motortrucking and tractor farming within the next few years.

Of course, there are plenty of other reasons. The war has killed o ffvast numbers of horses, while multiply-ing the manufacture of motors. When the struggle ends governments will have vast numbers of trucks and tractors to sell at clearin-out prices and factories will be ready to cater to private customers. But these factors, after all, merely hasten a development that was written in the book of fate.

An Appeal to Reason

To the Voters of New Hanover County:

Mr. George Harris has been an office-holder for eighteen years continuously; is a Magistrate and a United States Commissioner at the present time, and is a candidate for Recorder in the Democratic Primary, June 13, 1916.

Mr. George Harris, who is a candidate for Recorder, has a brother, Mr. W. N. Harris, who has been an office holder for sixteen years, and is now the efficient and courteous Clerk of the Superior Court in this County, at a salary of $3,000.

Mr. George Harris, a candidate for Recorder, has a cousin, Mr. Harris Northrop, and a near relative, who are Deputy Clerks of the Superior Court of this County.

Mr. George Harris, who is a candidate for Recorder, has a cousin, Mr. Chesley Bellamy, the able Assistant City Attorney of Wilmington.

Mr. George Harris, who is a candidate for Recorder, has a cousin, Mr. George Howell, "the Prince of good fellows," who is United States Referee in Bankruptcy in this County.

Mr. Harris, who is a candidate for Recorder, has a cousin, the "Duke of Brunswick," Hon. George H. Bellamy, United States Inspector in the Agricultural Department.

Mr. George Harris, a candidate for Recorder, has a cousin, Col. Walker Taylor, the progressive and able Collector of the Port of Customs of Wilmington, N. C.

Is New Hanover County so small that the Democratic party in it is only a family affair?

With malice toward none, but with love for the party of Zeb. Vance and Woodrow Wilson, it it not for the best interests of our party, our city, and our county, that we stop this, on June 12, 1916.

And is it not unfair to other citizens of this county that this condition should exist?

Lest we forget, Atlantic Coast Line employees, Mr. Harry Walters had no more loyal supporter than B. G. Empie, when he was in the Legislative Halls, nor has the Atlantic Coast Line ever had a more loyal local friend.

CUBS LOOM UP AS WINNERS

At End of First Half of Pennant Contest in Interurban League by Defeating E. Wilmington.

As a result of winning their game yesterday afternoon at East Wilmington with the home club, the Cubs won the first half of the pennant contest in the Interurban League. They defeated their opponents by a score of 14 to 12. Up until yesterday, the East Wilmington and Cubs were tied for top place with a percentage of .833. The second half of the season begins June 17, and if the cubs win the second half they will be awarded the Reach trophy, a silver loving cup. At Winter Park, the Red Sox won from the home team a score of 8 to 6, the heavy hitting of the winning team being the feature of the game.

The game between East Wilmington and the Cubs, was featured by the pitching of Casteen, and a pretty double play by Childs for the Cubs, who came from behind in the latter part of a very uphill game. Page pitched until the fourth inning, when he was relieved by Casteen. The umpires of the game were VanLandingham and Woodard. Three-base hits were made by Casteen and Childs for the Cubs at crucial points of the contest. For the East Wilmingtonians, Barlow made two and three-base hits, one of each; while Barlow and O. Pearsall each slammed out a two-base hit apiece.

For the Winter Park team, two-base hits were made by Monroe and Williams, respectively; while Cashwell and Laughridge each for the Red Sox knocked out two apiece; and Thigpen made one. The umpire of this game was Mr. Pridgen.

PAUL WINNER IN FINALS OF GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

C. E. Taylor Defeated Only by the Greatest Golfer in Carolinas.

Charlotte Man Wins Amateur Championship by Nine Up and Seven to Play in Closing Contest at Charlotte.

(Special Star Telegram.)

Charlotte, N. C., June 10.—W. M. Paul, of Charlotte, stands out the greatest golfer in the Carolinas, so far as was revealed in the closing contest of the tournament of the Carolina Golf Association here this afternoon, by defeating C. E. Taylor, of Wilmington, for the amateur championship by the total of nine up and seven to play. His playing has been the feature of the closing day of the meet.

The vice president of the association, W. M. Shand, of Columbia, S. C., won the first flight. The consolation was won by F. H. Gates, of Southern Pines. The consolation in the second flight was won by Dr. J. W. Stanly, of Wilmington, who won from H. C. Welborn, of Columbia, S. C., after a hard fight on the 57th green.

The Webb cup was won by T. H. Boyd, of Greenville, the Adams Riggs cup by Robin Brem, of Charlotte, and the handicap event by R. F. Peters.

Friday's Matches.

Regarding the matches on Friday in which the Wilmington players won new laurels for themselves, the Charlotte Observer yesterday had the following:

"The same glorious weather yesterday greeted players in the Carolina tournament, and as a result of the drying out of the greens, the standard of play improved perceptibly. Walter Paul continued to play at the top of his form and Dr. J. W. Stanly, of Wilmington suffered defeat at his hands, 13 up in the semi finals of the Amateur Championship Flight. Charlotte's premier exponent of the old Scottish game had his opponent 13 up at the turn and in the afternoon won the match by the same figure. Coming in the last nine in the morning, Paul's card showed all fours except Uo. 11 which was a three. Following was his record for the nine holes:

"In 4-3-4-4-4-4-4-4-4—35.

"C. E. Taylor, Jr., of Wilmington, won in his half of the same flight from T. Robin Brem, but this match was hard fought throughout, the final score being 3 and 2. The Charlotte player, who now ranks next to Paul, was off in his putting, a condition which doesn't appear often, for it is generally this player's short game which is especially brilliant. Taylor was also considerably the steadier in the pinches.

"Charlotte and Wilmington share the honor of having the two finalists, and the way Taylor is going, he should give Paul something to do. Theoretically speaking, no one expects the man from the Atlantic coast resort to have any chance, yet golf is an uncertain game as the many upsets in this tournament show. Barring a complete reversal of form, the Charlotte golfer should win easily.

"The second flight also got down to the finals, and Shand, of Columbia, who won from Vonno Gudger, of Asheville, on the 38th hole, plays W. F. Anderson, of Greenville, who had eliminated Vernon Porter after a hard battle.

"In the flights of less renown, all contests were finished. Henry C. Bridgers, of Tarboro, won the third, as was expected, from Theodore Wilbur, who was quite contented to win a runner-up cup—his first in the history of the Carolina tournaments. E. C. Elyemeyer was another sure winner in the fourth, and John Bass Brown did well to play as close a match as he did against the Greensboro wielder of the mashie.

"The first actual local winner was George Fitzsimmons, who captured the fifth flight from L. A. Mills, of Greenville, 2 and 1. Fitzsimmons has made fine showing in his class. The sixth fell to Connelly, of Durham; the seventh to Isaac Andrews of Spartanburg, and the last to W. J. Roddey, who lives in Rock Hill, but plays at the Mecklenburg club.

"The consolation events in the first and second flights lay between Louis Strange and H. G. Welborn. The winners in the lower flights were E. F. Mayberry, J. M. Milan, E. S. Nash, J. M. Oldham and J. A. Smith.

"T. H. Boyd, of Greenville, won the Colonel Webb cup for those who had never taken a prize in any event in the Carolina Association. The mayor of Greenville will be delighted no doubt, to see one of his own townsmen bring back the trophy. Boyd's score was 98, handicap 22, and net 76. The Judge Adams cup for the best ringer up looks as if it would go to Robin Brem, who has made a 69. Paul's score actually is best but he renounced any claim to the cup—he has glory enough already.

"The finals in the first and second flights will be played this morning and afternoon, and the handicap event will also be pulled off. Play may be started at any hour.

"The results of the day's play follow:

"Championship Flight—W. M. Paul beat Dr. J. W. Stanly, 13 and 11; C. E. Taylor, Jr., beat T. R. Brem, 3 and 2. Consolation—Grimball beat Newman, 7 and 6; Gates beat Crawford, 13 and 12."

W. L. I. HAVE FIRST PLACE

Head Liners Defeat Delgado in Close Game at Sunset Park—Immanuels Shut Out Brigade.

By defeating the strong Delgado team by the close score of 4 to 3 in an interesting game of baseball at Sunset Park yesterday afternoon, the Wilmington Light Infantry now occupy first place in the City League. In one of the prettiest games of the season, the Immanuels shut out the Boys' Brigade team, the winners getting two runs. There was a large and enthusiastic audience of spectators to witness both games.

When Ludlow, of the Delgado team, smashed into Hines at first base the latter took exception to the vigorous manner in which the former plunged and for a moment the game threatened to stop while the two players settled their differences. However, the matter was adjusted amicably and the game progressed smoothly for the remainder of the innings. The W. L. I. made three errors, three hits and four runs while Delgado made two errors, two hits and three runs. The batteries for the W. L. I. were Corbett and Bell and for Delgado Shepard and Kite.

In spite of the fact that the Immanuels shut out the Boys' Brigade, this game was closely contested throughout, each team getting four hits. The Immanuels made no errors, while the Boys' Brigade had but one error. The batteries for Immanuel were Yates and Gerdes and Register and Wilson for the Boys' Brigade.

The W. L. I. now have the first place in the League, the Delgado team the second; Immanuel third, and the Boys' Brigade fourth place.

TOP O' THE MORNING.

There is a vast difference between an excuse and a reason. I am not a Christian because it is a difficult thing to be a Christian.

This is an excuse. I am not a Christian because I am unwilling fairly to consider the claims of Jesus Christ and give my life to Him. This is a reason.

—CHAPMAN.

Our ideal of absolute preparedness is the most ships, the most guns and the most men.

Fooling all the people part of the time and fooling part of the people all the time is piker work compared with fooling the whole world.

North Carolina suits us. We can't imagine why anybody wants to leave home unless the sheriff makes himself disagreeable.

Half the year will be gone in three weeks. If we haven't done any great shakes for Wilmington during the first part of the year, it shows that it takes us too long to make up our minds to decide on something to do.

Timidity keeps men from doing lots of things. Fear that the war in Europe is soon coming to a close is giving lots of people cold feet about starting new enterprises that depend more on peace than on war for success. War psychology seems to control everybody who has money.

There has been no enthusiasm in the Republiacn national convention at Chicago. There was nothing for them to enthuse over and no great man to rally around. On the other hand, the Progressives indulged in enthusiasm, but it was all on account of one man. Enthusiasm is about all there is to the Progressive party.

One round is only the beginning of a fight to the finish. On the last round the fellow who is not able to toe the mark and come to the scratch again, indicates his inability to participate in further hostilities. You follow up this idea yourself and reach a conclusion that satisfies you that you and Sherman are right.

The woman's party which organized at Chicago right in the faces of the Republican and Progressive conventions, adopted a platform that contains only one plank. They propose that the old parties shall either stand on their plank or walk the plank. The Republican and Progressive conventions took the hint, but the Republicans straddled.

Senator LaFollette must not have expected to be nominated for president by the Republican convention at Chicago. He favored a munitions embargo plank for the platform, else somebody started the report on him to put a crimp in his presidential aspirations. LaFollettes ideas are about a quarter of a century ahead of the times.

Volunteers are wanted for an American expedition to the Antarctic regions. We like to read about that frozen end of the world, but when it comes to going on any sort of expedition, we prefer to exploit Brunswick county during the watermelon season. We can get more out of a watermelon than we can get out of a pipe dream about what we could see at the South Pole. We would rather stay here and take chances on buying North Carolina land from somebody who has "easy terms" to offer.

The latest specimens brought up from the depths of New Bern's artesian well were pieces of pine wood which the drill struck at a depth of more than 800 feet. That is more than 700 feet below the level of the sea, so the ocean at one time must have been at a lower level than the land upon which forest used to flourish 800 feet below us. Or was our coast a range of forest covered mountains which sank out of sight and have subsequently been overlaid with the silt brought down to the coast for ages?

TWO NOMINEES AT CHICAGO

The foreseen several days ago happened at Chicago yesterday. The Republican national convention nominated Associate Justice Charles E. Hughes for president, while the Progressive convention nominated Roosevelt by acclamation. After making Hughes' nomination unanimous, the Republican convention adjourned and the delegates are on their way home. When the Progressives learned that the Republicans had nominated Hughes, the Bull Moosers nominated Roosevelt with a whoop by acclamation. The Republicans nominated former Vice President Fairbanks for the vice presidency, while Roosevelt's running mate will be the Hon. John M. Parker, of Louisiana.

From the beginning it was evident that the Progressives had gone to Chicago to nominate Roosevelt and had the idea that they could whip the Republicans into line. They had no intention of making any concessions to the Republicans, but they soon learned that the G. O. P. could not be driven, nor coerced, nor cajoled into letting Roosevelt, the Progressive, dictate to the Republican national convention. The Republicans lost patience with the Progressives' tactics to bring them to terms. The old guard had none to make but offered to nominate any one of five Republicans that would be satisfactory to the Progressives. The latter always said "Roosevelt," whereupon the G. O. P. went on with its business to the finish.

Justice Hughes wired his acceptance of the nomination and resigned his place on the Supreme Court Bench of the United States. It is up to Roosevelt to decline the Progressive nomination and support Hughes and Fairbanks, but at this writing it is not known what he will do. We can only guess that he will get cold feet and decide to eat crow.

It is too early to predict the result of the double nomination at Chicago, but if both Hughes and Roosevelt stay in the field the re-election of Wilson is assured. If Roosevelt decides to support Hughes, we will have to bide a wee and watch public sentiment as it alternates between now and November.

Regardless of the two Chicago nominations, there is every reason why President Wilson and a Democratic Congress should be re-elected. Not everybody has been pleased, but they have done enough for the American people to justify continuance of the Democrats in power at Washington.

SAVE WHAT IS MADE.

Sometimes we think it is very foolish to urge sensible people to save what they make, but experience teaches us that a profligate American idea prevails to such a broad extent that American people allow millions of dollars worth of products to go to waste after they have been made. We are content to harvest our perishable products for temporary needs or a season's shipment and then let the surplus go to waste in the fields. We call it over-production, but there can be no such thing as over-production if we know what to do with it after it has cost us money to make it.

It is astonishing that we are so profligate as to let the least proportion of our production go to waste in the fields, but we keep right on doing it without getting at all serious over it as a matter of false economy of which we should be heartily ashamed. Twenty years is a long time in which to learn something or in which to see an opportunity, but for at least that many years The Star has pointed to the fact that we have actually sat down and let more than a million dollars worth of strawberries annually rot in the fields. A well posted man once told us that after the strawberry growers have shipped from $750,000 to $1,000,000 worth of strawberries while the market is good, just as many remain in the fields to go to waste. Wilmington is largely to blame for that, for no city on the earth ever had such a glaring opportunity to establish a great canning and preserving industry. We have actually harped on this subject till it seems absolutely useless to call attention to it again.

However, we are yet curious to know if it is not possible for us to wake up. When? We ought to have a picture of ourselves talking about advantages and opportunities while standing right in the midst of them with cold feet on the simplest kind of a proposition—such as a canning industry, for instance. Only the past few days the Chadbourn correspondent of The Star wrote that the shipping season for strawberries was over, but carloads of berries were going to waste in the fields. However, he said the growers were satisfied because they got good prices for the berries that had been shipped to the markets. That's the way it goes throughout the North Carolina strawberry belt. If we had been among the servants placed in that vineyard, as Biblical literature records, what do you suppose the boss man would have said to such people as we? As it is, however, we don't even seem to be disposed to kick ourselves for neglecting one of the richest opportunities that ever fell to the lot of a people.

Meanwhile, however, families have taken to canning and preserving more than ever and the agricultural departments of the United States and the State are encouraging thrift on the farms. There is need for it, as it really has become an absolute necessity. Even the metropolitan newspapers discuss it in strong editorials, such as this one that we take from the New York Sun:

"The prospect for a generously sufficient crop of fruits of various kinds is said by the expert forecasters to be good. Cherries, peaches, plums, apples and the berries are expected to be plentiful. With this in mind, the Federal government bureaus concerned with such matters and societies of one kind and another formed for the betterment of living conditions are urging that time be taken by the forelock and preparations made for conserving more of the fruit crop than ever heretofore. All of us know that the waste in our fruits is enormous.

"Before autumn is again at hand it is predicted that the cost of living will be even greater. All the staples, it is said, will advance in price, and, at the same time, everything required by human beings, not only to feed them, but to clothe and shelter them, will follow the upward course of the food cost. The dollar that buys less now than it bought a year ago is likely to buy still less six months hence. Nor is there any prospect of a downward trend within the year. Even should peace come to Europe, it is the opinion of those well qualified to judge that high prices will continue.

"There is, accordingly, more need now than in the past to make provision for the future. And more need to put an end to the extravagance and waste that hitherto have marked our handling of the fruit crops especially. There should be few reports this year of peaches, pears, cherries, plums and apples rotting on the trees or on the ground. The surplus should be preserved. Growers can equip themselves at little cost with portable preserving outfits, and, with their use, convert loss into profit. The housewife, at the same time, whether of the city or the country, is advised by the government and by the various organizations interested to increase her store of 'preserves' of every sort.

"The wisdom of this advice is evident. We have already felt the effects of the great war—we are, from day to day, in everything we purchase, making our financial contribution to the havoc and devastation that the war produces. The need of doing something to offset the higher cost of living is obvious. We can serve ourselves and the world at large in no better way than by eliminating a waste that is, every year, an appalling extravagance without excuse or reason."

The Sun is emphasizing this matter for the reason that the profligacy which The Star has mentioned from a local point of view actually prevails throughout the whole of America. It is to be hoped that the people of North Carolina will heed the economic plans of the Department of Agriculture at Washington and save what they have made as a surplus, highly valuable and needful in the shape in which it can be canned and preserved at home.

Nevertheless, production in North Carolina is so immense that home canneries can take care of only a small portion of it during the season. Nothing short of a great canning and preserving industry at Wilmington will aid Eastern North Carolina to save surplus crops of enormous value.

PACKING HOUSE PLANT AT JACKSONVILLE.

The Jacksonville Times-Union announced a few days ago that Armour & Company, the great Chicago packing concern, has concluded to establish a packing house at Jacksonville. That big concern has foreseen the development of a great livestock industry in the South and it is quick to take advantage of the opportunity that it will offer for the packing industry. It is significant, and the Florida paper declares that Armour & Company's intention to establish a meat packing industry in the Florida metropolis "will encourage those who desire to see Florida well started on the way to become the great cattle state for which it has every natural advantage."

That is true, else Armour & Company would not establish a packing industry there. It was an opportunity for Jacksonville's business men themselves, but they let the Chicago concern see it first and get it for Chicago. The profits will go to Chicago, but, anyhow, Jacksonville will have a packing house capable of handling 200 cattle, 50 hogs and 200 sheep a day, all built according to the latest models of construction. Last Sunday the Times-Union illustrated the proposed plant and carried a complete description of the buildings, various departments, cattle pens, etc.

The Times-Union in an editorial thus emphasizes the packing house as a factor in promoting a great livestock industry in Florida:

"As Mr. Minium, local representative of the Armours, said in an interview, 'It will be hard for the average citizen of the state of Florida to foresee the effect that the establishment of even a small Armour packing establishment is going to have on the business and farming prosperity of this section generally.' The very fact that people of their wide and long experience have decided that it is a good business proposition to establish such a plant in Florida is evidence that the capability of the state and its neighboring territory to develop a thriving livestock industry is recognized by others than residents of the state.

"One great drawback to the efforts to induce our farmers to take up the raising of beef cattle, hogs and sheep has been that there was no nearby market of sufficient magnitude to encourage them to embark in the industry. The same impediment, in some measure, stood in the way of inducing Northern capital to invest in cattle raising in Florida, though, as our readers know, there are several examples in the states of parties who have had the courage to pioneer in that direction. The improvement of Florida beef cattle and hogs and the increase of our flocks of sheep, the eradication of the cattle tick, the enactment of a stock law, the better supply of the meat markets of the state—all are brought nearer to accomplishment and made possibilities of the near future by this move of the Armour people.

"Instead of sending our cattle to Chicago and buying meat, we shall be able to sell them in Jacksonville and buy our meat at a home market. Where we have been receiving meat products from a distance Jacksonville will be a point of supply for other markets as well as its own. With more cattle farms and more farmers growing meat animals, Florida soils will become more fertile until our growers will be able to reap the full benefit of our even climate and length of growing season. When the tick is eradicated we shall be able to improve our livestock of all descriptions, and, as Mr. Minium says, 'It costs no more to raise a good 1,000-pound steer than a 600-pound scrub,' for Florida is able to produce abundance of the best of fodder and grasses for the making of beef."

That is all true. Whatever may be the value of farm production per annum in the South under its decadent agricultural system, the South can easily double it by a fully developed livestock industrdy that brings to us the packing house, creamery and cheese industries.

RIGHT ON THE JOB.

A newspaper dispatch from Chicago says Marion Butler stands in with both the Republicans and Progressives there. He knows how to do it, too. He can stay right behind those whiskers and work off a straddle on the smartest of the two aggregations.

You cant' lose the Sampsonian as a go-between. He can slide in and slide out, and it never is his fault if he can't deliver the goods on a fusionist deal.

MR. J. B. SCOTT EXPLAINS

To the Editor of The Star:

I request space in your paper to make a statement with reference to an account in your paper of an indictment brought against me for violation of the stock law in Pender county. The indictment referred to was a frame-up undoubtedly. From what can be learned from circulating reports, the tick men have for some time been making statements that they would have me up in a very few days, and people have seen their horses tied in the woods behind my plantation, the occupants slipping around in the woods peering at me while tilling my farm, expecting to find out if I was violating the stock law, so they could indict me, but this plan failed and then they fell upon another plan. So they ventured in.

One day I saw two men coming loitering up to where I was cultivating my crop and stopped at the end of the row and stood there till I drove out and one of them stated that he was around inspecting cattle. I told him I didn't think my cattle had any ticks on them, that I had examined my cattle often and had seen nothing but a few native ticks on them and I sprayed them myself and cleared them off easily.

On last year they advised me that they were not paying any attention to the native ticks, that they were harmless, and gave me a description of the fever tick, that I might know them when I saw them, and in view of this I told him if I saw anything that needed his attention I would send for him, and they walked off without requesting to be shown my cattle.

In a few days I was served with a warrant to appear before a justice of the peace at Atkinson, many miles away, and I appeared there in obedience to the summons, and when the charge was read it alleged that I refused to allow the tick man to inspect my cattle, and seeing that I was before what seems to be an oligarchy, I waived examination and had the matter turned over to the Superior court that I might have a just trial.

Very sincerely,
J. B. SCOTT

GOOD GOVERNMENT.

To the Editor of The Star:

No one who recognizes the righteousness of law and values citizenship underrates the advantages of good government. The end of government is the public good and government is not justified unless it is good. These truths are axiomatic, but in practice they are largely a dead letter.

The condition upon which good government can be secured is within the people's control. They have only to will good government to have it, and no community ever had bad government which was not the result of neglect of public duty. Bad government comes through incapable or corrupt officials, and there is no more justification for voting for an incompetent man for public office to do the public business than there is for a business man to employ an incompetent clerk for his private business. In the latter case the result is generally bankruptcy, and in the former case bankruptcy is averted only because governments do not usually repudiate their debts. In private business the failure is financial, while in public business it is moral.

No man has a claim to public office on the ground of private right. Competency is the only standard for public office, and to put a man in office for any other reason is to cheat the public of its rights.

Good government is secured through the exercise of independent judgment by the voters, and bad government is suffered when the voters are induced to make public office a private job.

CITIZEN.

CURRENT COMMENT

As a matter of course the Republicans do not like the way the Democrats have conducted the affairs of government, yet they may not be able to convince the people that they would do better.—Durham Herald.

There is no doubt about Charlotte's growth as a center for diversified industries. The gains within the past ten years have been noteworthy. The procurement of small industries, with a good-sized weekly payroll, was a matter in which the city made no investment of interest or enthusiasm in an organized way until the late lamented Greater Charlotte Club came into being. That organization did valiant service toward getting them. Like almost all organizations of its kind, the Greater Charlotte Club had a few men—and they were all too few—who did the work. To these men, and they can almost be counted on one's fingers, the city owes much of the enterprise in the way of bringing new industries to Charlotte. They builded better than they knew. The city is developing rapidly along these lines, but it ought to increasingly devote its attention to this phase of its building. We have remarked before that there is a field for organized civic effort outside of the business of facetory-grabbing. We have no patience with the theory that all a city has to do to get an industry is to send a delegation to some other city where it is located, cut loose a flow of oratory to the head of the enterprise, and then come home. The way to get an industry started here is to create home conditions, living conditions, that will be attractive to industrial monarchs, where life for employes will be pleasant and conducive to maximum efficiency. A factory head is not so much concerned about how manys paved streets a city has as he is concerned over what sort of a life it will be possible for his employes to live here. This is the newly developed genius of factory-getting. Make Charlotte the best place in the state in which tho average working man can live and Charlotte will have more diversified industries than any city in the State.—Charlotte News.

No. 13.---MAKING DECISIONS

From the time we are old enough to know right from wrong we are compelled to make decisions; to say "yes" to some things and "no" to others. In fact, all life consists in yielding to good impulses and resisting the bad. No man ever succeeded unless he learned this lesson. We can never form a character, acquire property, gain knowledge, provide for old age, take care of those dependent upon us, or get a job worth while until we learn to make decisions. And the men who draw the big salaries are those who can pass judgment, and are willing to stand by the judgments they make.

It is the easiest thing in the world to take the line of least resistance and to do the easy thing. If a man would acquire an education he must forego pleasures for a time. If he would get and keep a good job, he must deny himself indulgences that do not tend in the right direction. If he would save money he must make decision after decision and stick to them.

How many of us resolve that we will save money and make a good start, but fall down, because we yield to the temptation to go to those places or in that company where our resisting power will be weakened. Suppose we have a spare night. If we stay at home we know that we won't spend any money. If we go to the theatre we will spend a certain amount; but if we go to the club, or out with the crowd, we are not certain where we will go, or what we will do, and being with the crowd we must do as the crowd does. The result is bound to be a breaking down of the resolution to save.

The habit of consistently saying "no" can only be acquired when a man has an ambition, a goal, and an incentive. If he would own a home, acquire a business, get a good job, be a man among men, and have a master passion, the impetus will be with him steadily to spur him on and help him make the many little decisions that bring the result he desires. The bread line is full of men who could not make decisions and stick to them; who played with temptations of various kinds until they lost out; whose declining years must be spent in doing the easy things because in other days they couldn't do the hard ones.

You never will learn the secret of how men acquire money until you learn the fine art of making decisions; and if you do not learn this lesson for yourself, the world will decide for you, and the decision will doubtless be that you have no will power, are not strong in keeping promises to yourself and therefore cannot be expected to be strong in keeping those to others, and relegate you to the "never was," where you will drift along until the end. The saddest thing on the ocean is a drifting ship, and the saddest thing in life is the man who is going nowhere, and cares not how long it takes him to get there.

NEW HANOVER PRIMARY TO BE HELD TOMORROW

To Name Candidates for Sheriff, Recorder and Solicitor.

Congressional Primary Election Will Not Be Held Until July 1.—The Campaign is Being Conducted Vigorously.

The second primary for the nomination of candidates for county offices will be held tomorrow beginning at sunrise and continuing until sunset. Owing to the fact that the congressional primary will not be held until July 1, there is said to be some confusion among the voters as to the county primary. It was at first the intention of the Democratic Executive committee to have the county primary at the same time as for the Congressional primary but the candidates for county offices felt that this would be unduly prolonging the campaign for them and they asked that it be held earlier.

In view of the fact that no greater expense would be entailed by having the county primary, at an earlier date, the executive committee at a meeting the past week acceded to the request to have it on Monday of this week. The same registrars and judges that served in the primary on Saturday, June 3, will be in charge of the primary election tomorrow.

The polls will open at 5 o'clock, the official Washington time for sunrise tomorrow morning and will close at 7:24 o'clock in the evening, this being the official time for the sun to set in these parts. Qualified voters will be entitled to cast their ballots at any time during the day between these hours.

Mr. E. Piner, secretary of the Board of Elections, pointed out yesterday that voters, who did not pay their poll tax by May 1 of this year, are not qualified to cast a ballot in the primary and should they do so would commit a felony under the statutes. However, it is not expected that anyone who is not a qualified voter will attempt to vote in the primary.

While the campaign is being pushed vigorously by the different candidates, it is being conducted quietly and apparently is devoid of any unpleasant features. Every effort will be made by the friends of the candidates to see that their full strength is polled.

Sheriff S. P. Cowan and Mr. George C. Jackson are the candidates for Sheriff, who will be voted on tomorrow. Recorder Brooke G. Emple is being opposed by Justice Harriss in the race for Recorder. County Solicitor George L. Peschau is opposed by E. T. Burton, Esq. These are the only candidates to be voted on tomorrow.

With the Congressional primary three weeks off, the race between Congressman H. L. Godwin and Hon. J. A. Brown has not yet warmed up to any considerable extent in New Hanover. Both these gentlemen were in Wilmington the past week and each was apparently well pleased with the outlook.

Regarding the rumor that was abroad yesterday in Wilmington that Major Joseph W. Little who ran third in the Congressional primary, would support Mr. Brown in the second primary, Major Little stated that he would not take any part in the second race as he had already made his fight and felt that it should now be left to those in the race.

MRS. HATTIE BROCK DEAD

Passed Away Early Last Night After Short Illness at Hospital.

Mrs. Hattie Brock, 18 years old, of Clarkton; passed away last night at 8 o'clock at the James Walker Memorial hospital from an attack of eclampsia. Mrs. Brock had been a patient at the hospital since last Tuesday and had been unconscious for several days.

ATLANTIC CITY AN EXAMPLE

Mr. A. B. Skelding Goes to Northern Summer Resort to Get Ideas—He Found Plenty of Them.

"If Wrightsville Beach ever makes a mistake in any public improvement, it will be the fault of the management, as there is a precedent at Atlantic City for everything that it may be desired to undertake," declared Mr. A. B. Skelding, general manager of the Tidewater Power Company, upon his return from the noted Northern summer resort, where he spent the past week.

"I should imagine," said Mr. Skelding, "that Wrightsville Beach has reached about the same stage of development as Atlantic City had attained a quarter of a century ago. They have made dozen of improvements since and have made lots of mistakes in foundation, bulkhead and beach protection, all of which we can benefit by when we have advanced a little further in our development."

Mr. Skelding while at the Northern resort conducted an extensive investigation. He found that property there was selling all way from $100 for ocean front property to $5,000 a front foot and that much of it is obtainable even at these fancy prices. Mr. Skelding was particularly impressed with the lawns, which he says are the most beautiful he has ever seen and with nothing to start with that cannot be had in Wilmington. Incidentally Mr. Skelding noted that it cost ten cents to take a trolley car from the mainland to the island.

Mr. Skelding found it to be rather cool at the resort and that this was causing the season to be a little backward in starting. It was necessary to run steam heat at the hotels several days last week and on the morning he left the train had to be heated in order to make it comfortable. However, there was no disposition to be pessimistic on the part of the hotel owners as they expect it to be hot enough inland later on to make cool weather quite desirable.

Mr. Skelding said yesterday that as he just returned to the city he did not care to make any statement relative to the rumors of a contemplated change to a one man system for the trolley cars operated in Wilmington.

EXAMINATIONS TO BE HELD

Supt. John J. Blair Makes Statement Relative to Tutoring Students.

Mr. John J. Blair, superintendent of the Wilmington city schools, yesterday issued a statement regarding those students who by reason of illness or other causes have conditions to make up during the summer. Mr. Blair says that in no case will they be excused from examinations to be given at the High School faculty. His statement follows:

"As a number of inquiries have been made with regard to students who, by reason of illness or other cause, have conditions to make up during the summer, in order that there may be no misundertanking, I think it well to make this statement, as a matter of general information.

"1. All examinations will be held at the High School, and by the High School faculty, just previous to the opening of school. The time for each subject will be indicated as necessary.

"2. The work and examination which may be given by any individual, who is coaching students, will not, in any case, be received as a substitute for the above mentioned examination.

"3. When students report for examination, the faculty of the High School will be glad to receive from the coach a statement as to just what ground has been covered, and the progress which the student has made. If written tests are held, they can be marked and submitted, together with the above information, as they will aid the regular teacher in determining the character and thoroughness of the work which has been done.

"Yours respectfully,
"JOHN J. BLAIR,
"Supt. Public Schools."

MR. R. R. LOVE DEAD.

Wholesale Grocer, Formerly of Wilmington, Passes at Mullins, S. C.

Many friends in Wilmington and this entire section will be grieved to learn of the death of Mr. R. R. Love, who formerly conducted a wholesale grocery business in this city but who has been engaged in business in Mullins, S. C., for the last several years. His death occurred yesterday morning at 10 o'clock at his home in Mullins, following an illness of several weeks. He was a native of Wilmington and was 48 years old. He was a splendid business man and had been very successful as a wholesale grocer.

Surviving the deceased besides his wife and four children are three brothers, Messrs. W. W. Love, B. R. Love and T. D. Love, of Wilmington, and two sisters, Mrs. T. L. Hubbard, Jr., of this city, and Mrs. J. M. Fleming, of Ludowici, Ga., all of whom will have the tenderest sympathy of a host of friends.

Relatives in Wilmington left yesterday afternoon for Mullins to attend the funeral services which will be held today from the Presbyterian church in Mullins, of which the deceased was a devoted member. The interment will be in Cedardale cemetery in that city and will be in charge of the Knights of Pythias, of which order he was a valued member.

ATTENTION, ODD FELLOWS.

HENRY FORD DECLINES TO MAKE ADDRESS HERE

Urgent Efforts Made to Get Him to Attend Road Convention.

Much Interest in Good Roads Meeting to be Held at Wrightsville Beach. Another Special Prize Offered. Delegates.

Mr. Henry Ford, of Detroit, Mich., who first achieved fame as the manufacturer of a popular priced automobile and later as being the best advertiser in America with the single exception of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, has declined an invitation to make an address at the annual meeting of the North Carolina Good Roads Association to be held at Wrightsville Beach, June 21-23, but did not say in his letter to Dr. Joseph Hyde Pratt, secretary of the association, whether or not he would come to the convention. Having left the matter open to this extent a number of Wilmingtonians have sent him urgent invitations to attend, even if he doesn't make a speech, assuring him that he will be given a most hospitable and cordial welcome.

Among the prizes which are to be offered at the Road Convention is a silver cup to the owner of the automobile which travels the longest distance in coming to the convention. Other prizes are to the county for the largest number of delegates in proportion to distance from Wilmington and population; to counties for the best exhibits, including pictures, maps, charts, etc., and to parties exhibiting the best road photograph.

Among those who are to address the Good Roads Convention at Wrightsville is Dr. H. M. Rowe, of Baltimore, president of the American Automobile Association. Dr. Rowe has some very interesting data in regard to the use of the automobile tax in Maryland, and will undoubtedly give some ideas which will be of very great value to the road cause in North Carolina.

Already 4,000 delegates have been appointed to the Good Roads Convention, and it is believed that a great many of these will go. Letters are constantly being received from various sections of the State saying that automobile parties are being made up to attend the Convention, special Pullmans are being arranged for, and in some cases special trains.

One feature of the convention which will be very pleasant for the delegates is a luncheon to be given by the Carolina Metal Products Company, of which Mr. George P. Galvin is manager. Mr. Galvin has assisted in the advertisement of the convention, and is contributing a great deal to its success.

The Raleigh Chamber of Commerce has named the following delegates to attend the convention: Henry T. Hicks, J. G. Brown, W. G. Riddick, president of the A. & M. College; J. M. Broughton, Jr., Alan T. Bowler, Judge R. W. Winston, Dr. C. L. Smith, E. C. Smith, A. L. Baker, Geo. P. Polk, L. McA. Goodwin, C. V. York, Col. J. Bryan Grimes, W. L. Beasley, Dr. R. P. Noble, J. W. McGee, Jr., W. E. Murchison, W. S. Boyd, Josephus Daniels, Jr., J. E. O'Donnell, Dr. M. C. Horton.

Other cases disposed of were those of Aaron Fuller, colored, who was fined $15 and costs on the charge of having assaulted Joe Walton, colored, with a pair of brass knucks; Robert Spicer colored, against whom an assault charge was held open; B. F. Piver and J. T. Bailey, charged with affray. The first named defendant failed to appear, the latter was taxed with one-half the costs.

A. Price, chairman of the special committee, appointed by the Wilmington Chamber.

Mr. Price on May 30th wrote the State Corporation Commission as follows:

"I am sending herewith copy of complaint by Baltimore & Carolina Steamship Company, et al., versus Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company, et al., filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission and also copy of answer to complaint.

"My committee thinks there is merit in the complaint and therefore desires that you study it and if you think it is a meritorious case, I request that you represent Wilmington at the hearing before Examiner Watkins in the United States Court rooms at Goldsboro, N. C., July 17th, 10 o'clock A. M., having been informed by the president of the Baltimore & Carolina Steamship Company that the hearing will so take place.

"Your prompt consideration and reply will be very much appreciated.

"Yours respectfully,

"Chairman Special Committee."

The following letter has been received by Mr. Price in reply:

"Dear Sir:—I am directed to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 30th ult. to the chairman of the Commission, who has been absent from the city for some days, and to say that the Commission will give careful consideration to the matter suggested in your letter, and if the suit referred to is deemed to be a meritorious one the Commission will take pleasure in representing the Chamber of Commerce of the city of Wilmington as requested and file petition of intervention in the proceeding and represent your Chamber at the hearing.

"Very respectfully,
"A. J. MAXWELL, Clerk."

INSTALLS REFRIGERATOR PLANT.

New Model Machine Just Placed With Mr. C. O. Knox—Motive Power.

Mr. R. H. Jarman, agent in this territory for the manufacturers, has just completed the installation at the store of Mr. C. O. Knox, Seventh and Red Cross streets, a one-ton ice and refrigeration plant that is a marvel in its way and is attracting much attention among the friends and patrons of Mr. Knox.

The plan is made by the G. R. Jarman Refrigerating Co., of Baltimore, and its motive power is a two H.P. kerosene engine of the Bessemer type. The operation of this machine for a few hours a day gives the plant a 35 degree temperature and for the rest of the day the engine is utilized by Mr. Knox in running a sausage grinder, coffee mill and other light machinery that is used in connection with his store and meat market.

YESTERDAY WAS ANNIVERSARY.

Of Big Bethel Battle in War Between States—First Land Conflict.

It will be of interest to the readers of The Star to know that yesterday was the 55th anniversary of the battle of Big Bethel, the first land conflict of the War Between the States. This battle was fought on Virginia soil and the First Infantry of North Carolina made a gallant defense, driving back the Northern army with the loss of several hundred men. The only Southern man killed in this action was Henry Wyatt, who won immortal fame as being the first Confederate soldier to give his life in defense of his country.

There are three survivors of the battle of Big Bethel, who live in Wilmington. They are Maj. William H. Bernard, for many years publisher and proprietor of The Star; Adjutant L. Leon, and Mr. James H. Taylor, Sr. All of these gallant veterans are still hale and hearty and recall vividly the stirring scenes of more than a half century ago.

MR. CAREY H. FLEMMING WEDS MISS MARY CRANOR BRYAN

Buie's Creek, N. C., June 19.—Buie's Creek Baptist church was the scene Thursday evening at 8:30 of a beautiful marriage when Miss Mary Cranor Bryan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Murphy Bryan, was married to Mr. Carey Hunter Flemming, of Wilmington. The bride is a direct descendant of the McNeils and McKays of Colonial fame, a granddaughter of Capt. Elias Bryan, of Chatham county, N. C.

The decorations were very simple and effective. Tall palms and ferns intermingled with large white columns surrounded the improvised altar, over which hung the marriage bell of white jessamine. The bride was charming in a lovely creation of white tulle and chiffon. The bridal veil was fastened to her coiffeure with orange blossoms and the bride carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

The bride entered on her father's arm, preceded by little Miss Mary Shaw Bryan, who carried the ring in a magnolia bud and little Misses Annie White Pearce and Iris Bryan who scattered flowers. Little Misses Mildred and Mary Kivett opened the gates. Miss Pauline Bryan, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore white chiffon over yellow taffet and carried a shower bouquet of hollyhocks and blue-bells. Mrs. John W. Chapin, of Aurora, sister of the bride, was dame of hnor. She was handsomely gowned in a combination of pink crepe-de-chine and nile green georgette crepe with gold trimmings and carried a sheaf of pink lilies. Miss Selma Flemming of Hessell, the groom's sister, and Miss Bessie Howard, of Fuquay, were brides-maids. They wore white chiffon and taffeta with real lace and carried white roses. The groomsmen were Mr. Laurie Bryan, brother of the bride, and Mr. M. Formyduval, of Whiteville, N. C. They were in full dress.

Chopin's Nocturne and Angels Serenade were beautifully rendered on the pipe organ by Miss Bessie Campbell, and "To a Wild Rose," by McDowell, was softly played during the ceremony. Miss Gladys Greene sang "A Perfect Day," before the bridal party entered. WALLACE NEWS NOTES OF INTEREST IN SOCIAL CIRCLES

Wallace, N. C., June 10.—An audience as large as ever seen here, of Wallace and out-of-town people, entirely filled the newly finished opera house Friday night and witnessed the first play to be given in the new auditorium. It was in every way a great success, as was expected beforehand. From the first to the last scene it was full of life and fun. Miss Sallie P. Hines, under whose direction and management this performance was staged, needed no introduction to our people. She is a reader and teacher of expression of no mean ability, and has made for herself a reputation to be envied. Her friends are glad to compliment Miss Hines' splendid work done in her classes the past session and on the success of this play, "The Private Secretary."

Those taking part in the play were Misses Ella Cooper, Sallie Hines, Ellis Register and Alice Hussey, Messrs. Aubrey Cavenaugh, Clifton Knowles, Jeremiah and Carr Southerland, Norwood Boney, H. H. Matthews and Herbert Cavenaugh.

Friends will regret to learn that Mrs. Wharton Williams is quite sick at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Colwell.

Mrs. Burke Newkirk and children, of Winston-Salem, are visiting her mother, Mrs. Lou McIntire.

Friends are glad to see Mr. N. H. Carter home "well and sound," after his narrow escape in South Carolina. Last week while in Columbia Mr. Carter attempted to cross a street, when an automobile, without any warning whatever, ran into him. He was knocked down, the car being obliged to back for him to be released. Mr. Carter was unconscious for some hours. Otherwise, he was not seriously hurt.

On account of the absence of the pastor, Rev. W. P. M. Currie, the services Sunday night at the Presbyterian church were conducted by the Christian Endeavor, Mr. D. W. Darden, leader. There were two organists for the meeting, Miss Madge Southerland and Mrs. Darden. Several special and beautiful selections were given by the choir, of which Miss Jennie Clement had charge. Helpful talks on the subject for the meeting, "Consecration of Money," were made by the leader, Mr. Darden, and the Hon. George R. Ward. The pulpit for Sunday morning services was filled by Mr. James Henry Moore, of Burgaw.

Messrs. Almond Carter and Westbrook Murphy, students of A. & M. College and Trinity College, respectively, are home for their vacations.

CHAUTAUQUA WEEK IN KINSTON SOCIAL NOTES OF INTEREST.

Kinston, N. C., June 10.—Next week will be chautauqua week for a number of East Carolina towns. Kinston, New Bern, Greenville and Washington will be having their summer festivals simultaneously. Washington opens its chautauqua first—on Monday. The opening event here will be on Wednesday afternoon. Attractions to be enjoyed by half a dozen places include Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, the famous pastor of the Central Congregational church, Brooklyn; "The Mikado" under direction of George V. C. Lord; Dr. Lincoln Wirt, Arctic explorer, and others.

Miss Leafy Spear served a course dinner at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Spear, on Peyton avenue, Thursday evening in honor of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Scott, who celebrated the first anniversary of their wedding.

Mrs. J. C. Heath entertained the Homeworkers of Gordon Street Christian church Tuesday evening at her home on East Gordon street.

With no weddings scheduled nor anything out of the ordinary planned by the clubs, local society next week will devote its time almost exclusively to the Chautauqua, which begins on Wednesday and continues through seven days. Chautauqua parties became popular in the seasons of 1914 and 1915, they will be more so this year, with June brides for whom to entertain scarce and the societies and clubs holding listless sessions, as is usual at this season. The recent brides, Mrs. David L. Dixon and Mrs. Thos. Woodley Heath, may arrive from their honeymoons during the week, in which event the social monotony will be broken.

The Methodists of this city have had a large representation at the Epworth League State conference in New Bern, the two places being but an hour's ride apart. Besides the delegates large numbers of members have been going over in the afternoon for the night sessions.

MRS. H. H. CLARK ENTERTAINS IN HONOR MISS KATIE CLARK

Abbottsburg, N. C., June 10.—On last Friday afternoon from 5 to 7 the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Clark was all astir, the occasion being a handkerchief and hose shower given in honor of Miss Katie Clark, of Clarkton, who on June 21st is to become the bride of Dr. King, of Lumberton.

At the appointed hour the guests began to arrive and were met at the front entrance of the porch by Mrs. E. E. Craven and Miss Lois Breeeden. After the usual greetings each guest was conducted to the registry table, presided over by Miss Margaret Craven, and asked to register her name under a wish written for the bride. After much merriment here the guests were led to the punch bowl, where a most refreshing fruit punch was gracefully served by little Misses Mildred Fletcher and Louise Craven.

After this refreshment the guests were conducted to a farther side of the porch, where they were received by the hostess and presented to the bride-to-be, and to the visiting guests, Mesdames Carrowan, of Maxton, and Marvin Fletcher, of McColl.

Very soon the conversation became merry. The charming hostess, wishing to lend all the assistance possible to the young prospective bride, passed a blank recipe book and asked each guest to write a cooking recipe therein. The bride-to-be most graciously accepted this book and promised to use the recipes when those present came to be her guests.

Delicious ice cream and pound cake, baked in marble effect of pink and white, were served by the Misses Craven and Fletcher. On each plate were dainty souvenir cards, bearing the date of the day and a cluster of apple blossoms. After this very enjoyable part of the occasion, the hostess invited her very dear friend, Kittie, into the sitting room and immediately Miss Breeden came and invited the guests to follow.

The prospective bride was found perched upon a pink and white stool under a suspended daintily hand-decorated pink and white parasol, which was filled with lovely hosiery and handkerchiefs of all the delicate hues desired by a bride. The parasol was overturned by the hostess and the neatly wrapped packages showered upon the little lady of honor.

Nor was Dr. King, the prospective groom, forgotten. Some very thoughtful friend had put into the parasol for him a red bandanna handkerchief and a pair of stoutly knit blue and white sox. This gift for the groom was most daintily wrapped in tissue paper, and as Miss Clark unwrapped the package its contents surprised even the hostess herself.

This entertainment was only one of the many tokens of esteem that have been shown Miss Clark, the very popular and attractive daughter of Dr. and Mrs. G. L. Clark, of Clarkton.

BEAUTIFUL HOME WEDDING CELEBRATED AT RED SPRINGS

Red Springs, N. C., June 10.—A beautiful home wedding of interest to many throughout this section took place Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Brown, when their daughter, Miss Polly Brown, became the wife of Mr. Thomas C. Rogers, also of Red Springs. The parlors, dining room and halls were tastefully decorated with ferns, potted plants and smilax, the color scheme being white and green. The ceremony took place in the drawing room, before an improvised altar of white, daintily decorated with asparagus, plumosus, and softly lighted by numerous candles.

At the first strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin, beautifully rendered by Misses Allison Pearsall and Annie Johnson and Mr. Rowland Brown, violinist, with Miss Carrie McNeill pianist, the bridal party descended the stairway, which was carpeted in white, and entered the drawing room, in the following order: First, the little ribbons bearers, Misses Katherine McLean and Louise McNeill, dressed in dainty white lingerie; then, Master Joel Horne Turner, bearing the ring on a silver tray, a gift to the bride from the Red Springs chapter, U. D. C., of which she is a member; next, the dame of honor, Mrs. J. A. Williams, sister of the bride, handsomely gowned in apple green chiffon over taffeta, carrying sweet peas; last, the bride, who was lovely in her robe of charmeuse and georgette crepe, with court train and trimmings of duchess lace embroidered with pearls, the veil of tulle with a wreath of orange blossoms. She was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Mr. R. L. Henderson, where the solemn words were spoken that made them husband and wife.

The ceremony was most impressively performed by Rev. Dr. C. G. Vardell, president of Flora MacDonald College, assisted by Rev. H. M. Eure, pastor of the Methodist church.

Immediately after the ceremony a brilliant reception was tendered the bridal party and invited guests. Those in the receiving line were members of the bridal party and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Townsend, and Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Newton. Those receiving in the sitting room were Mr. J. A. Williams and Misses Mary McEachern and Susie Moore. From the sitting room the guests were ushered into the dining room, where they were received by Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Sikes. Here a delicious ice course was served by Misses Gladys Toon, Margaret Buie and Alice Hall. Punch was served on the veranda by Misses Bess Jones, Annie Johnson, Allie Pearsall and Hannah Townsend.

MR. HEYER BADLY WOUNDED

Thelma Lewis, Young White Woman, Lodged in Jail Charged With Shooting Local Attorney.

Henry Heyer, Esq., a prominent young member of the Wilmington bar, probably one of the largest owners of real estate in Wilmington, is in the James Walker Memorial Hospital, seriously, if not fatally wounded, a pistol ball from a 32-calibre Colt's revolver having passed entirely through the left side of his lower abdomen, and Thelma Lewis, a young white woman with whom the young man is said to have been infatuated for several months and with whom he was said to be endeavoring to break off, is locked up without bond charged with having done the shooting, yesterday morning a little after 3 o'clock at 1405 North Seventh street, where the young woman resided.

It was necessary for the physicians of Mr. Heyer to have an operation yesterday afternoon, but it was stated last night that the results were entirely satisfactory and that the young man was resting as comfortably as could be expected. Mr. Heyer has a great many friends in the city, all of whom will hope most sincerely that he may soon recover from the wound.

As to the cause of the shooting, there are several versions, one being to the effect that the woman claims she was being ill-treated and that she shot to prevent the receipt of Further injury while another has it that the Lewis woman refused to give up an article she had in her possession and upon Mr Heyer insisting that she do so shot him.

Acting on the advice of her counsel L. Clayton Grant, Esq., it was stated by Jailer Branch yesterday that the Lewis woman refused to discuss the shooting in advance of a court hearing. When the police placed the Lewis woman under arrest soon after the shooting they found Ida Smith also at the home, but the latter stated that she did not see the shooting.

County Solicitor George L. Peschau, accompanied by Justice of the Peace J. J. Moore and Officer T. M. Hall visited the hospital yesterday morning for the purpose of taking an ante-mortem statement but the physicians declared that in their judgment this was unnecessary at that time.

When the Lewis woman was placed under arrest yesterday morning by Officer J. O. Bullard she is said to have showed signs of having been engaged in a scuffle with some one. Her lower lip, according to the police, was badly lacerated and her right arm somewhat bruised. She is a young woman, about 21 years of age. She apparently was little concerned over the shooting and took the matter quite calmly.

Mr. Heyer shortly after the shooting yesterday morning was taken to the hospital by Judge Newkirk, a hack driver, who was in that vicinity. Officer J. O. Bullard, accompanied by Sergeant Lane and Policemen M. C. Gray, W. H. Kermon and R. J. [illegible]mpson went to the scene shortly aft[illegible]rds. Ida Smith was taken into custo[illegible] a material witness but was later [illegible] under bond.

nomination and extending congratulations. At 1 o'clock lunch was announced for the family and a little later came the dispatch announcing the nomination. Mr. Green, the secretary, mounted the stairs three at a time.

Learns of Nomination.

"I simply told the Justice he had been nominated and turned my back," he remarked later.

Newspaper men crowded into the Justice's office seeking an audience. Mr. Hughes came down to the reception hall, tears in his eyes and a tremble in his voice as he accepted the congratulations of the newspaper representatives and shook their hands. He was asked for a statement:

"Now all I know about this is what you boys tell me, and I have nothing to say now, but if you are interested I may have a statement for you at 3 o'clock," he replied.

As the newspaper men rushed out, the Justice turned to Mr. Green with the remark: "Now for the statement." And the two entered the office, where the Justice dictated his resignation from the Supreme Court and his telegram to Chairman Harding.

With copies of the letter of his resignation and messages to Chairman Harding in his hand, Mr. Hughes later came upstairs to meet the newspaper men who awaited him. There was none of the subdued tone or hesitation which had characterized his first greeting.

Has Many Callers

Among the first callers at the house after the news spread was Rufus S. Day, son of Justice Day, of the Supreme Court, with a message from his father who is ill in Canton, O. Then came Robert H. Fuller, private secretary to Mr. Hughes, while he was governor of New York. The latter accompanied the nominee on his short walk. Not long afterward Justice Brandeis and Mrs. Brandeis arrived and were received by Mr. and Mrs. Hughes. Hundreds gathered about the residence during the afternoon but there was no demonstration. In the line of automobiles that filled up the street was that of the President and Mrs. Wilson, out for a ride.

At 6 o'clock Mr. Hughes was told the substance of the statement issued by Mr. Roosevelt but replied that he had nothing to say. During the evening telegrams by the hundreds poured in and many callers left cards while a violet hail and electric storm was in progress.

It has been since becoming a member of the Supreme Court that Mr. Hughes has been in Washington. In legal circles his greatest work has been regarded as the opinions in the two cent rate cases. In his first year on the bench he announced the court's decision that an Alabama status sanctioning a form of peonage was unconstitutional. Later he enunciated a series of opinions on the pure food law in which he stood for a broad interpretation of that statute.

In the last few months he jointed in holding constitutional an amendment to the Pure Food law by which Congress had specifically extended the statute to ally to "quack medicines." Justice Hughes had been out voted by his colleagues in extending the original law to such medicines and had suggested the needs of Congress amending the law. He wrote the decision holding the Oklahoma Jim Crow Law, applying to inter-state commerce as unconstitutional and dissented from the court in its action in anulling an unconstitutional a Kansas state law making it a criminal offense for an employer to require an employe to agree not to join a union. He also dissented in the Leo M. Frank case, joining Justice Holmes in holding that Frank had not been accorded a fair trial on the indictment of having murdered the factory girl, Mary Phagan, at Atlanta. He had rendered the court's opinion, announcing the Arizona alien labor law un constitutional because it denied to foreigners an opportunity to work.

Taft Sends Congratulations.

Chief Justice White tonight was confronted with the problem of what to do with several opinions prepared by Mr Hughes as a member of the court for delivery Monday and approved by the bench in chambers. He took up the question with the Associate Justices at the usual conference tonight.

Among the hundreds of telegrams received by Mr. Hughes was one from former President Taft. It read:

"I congratulate you on a testimonial to your standing as a statesmen, citizen and patriot—unique and unexampled in the history of American politics and I felicitate the country on an opportunity it will certainly embrace."

Of the presidential candidates before the Republican convention Fairbanks, Root, Weeks, Cummins, Burton and Knox sent telegrams of congratulations.

JUSTICE HUGHES WIRES HE ACCEPTS NOMINATION

Washington, June 10.—Following is Justice Hughes' telegram to Chairman Harding, accepting the nomination:

"Mr. Chairman and Delegates:

"I have not desired the nomination. I have wished to remain on the bench. But in this critical period in our national history I recognize that it is your right to summon; that it is my paramount duty to respond. You speak at a time of national exigency, transcending merely partisan consideration. You voice the demand for a thorough-going Americanism with firm protective upbuilding policies essential to our peace and security, and to that call, in this crisis, I cannot fail to answer with the pledge of all that is in me to the service of our country. Therefore, I accept the nomination.

"I stand for the firm and unflinching maintenance of all the rights of American citizens on land and sea. I neither impugn motives nor under estimate difficulties. But it is most regretably true that in our foreign relations we have suffered incalculably from the weak and vaccilating course which has been taken with regard to Mexico—a course lamentably wrong with regard to both our rights and our duties. We interfered without consistency and while seeking to dictate when we were not concerned, we utterly failed to appreciate and discharge our plain duty to our own citizens. At the outset of the administration, the high responsibilities of our diplomatic intercourse with foreign nations were subordinated to a conception of partisan requirements and we presented to the world a humiliating spectacle of ineptitude. Belated efforts have not availed to recover the influence and prestige so unfortunately sacrified and brave words have been stripped of their force by indecision.

"I desire to see our diplomacy restored to its best standards and to have these advanced; to have no sacrifices of national interest to partisan expediencies; to have the first ability of the country always at its command here and abroad, in diplomatic intercourse to maintain firmly our rights under international law; insisting steadfastly upon all our rights as mutual and fully performing our international obligations and by the clear correctness and justness of our positions and our manifest ability and disposition to sustain them to dignify our place among the nations.

"I stand for an Americanism that knows no ulterior purpose; for a patriotism that is single and complete. Whether native or naturalized, of whatever race or creed, we have but one country and we do not for an instant tolerate any division of allegiance.

"I believe in making prompt provisions to assure absolutely our national security. I believe in preparedness, not only adequate for our defense with respect to numbers and equipment in both army and navy, but with all thoroughness to the end that in each branch of the service there may be the utmost efficiency under the most competent administrative heads.

"We are devoted to the ideals of honorable peace. We wish to promote all wise and practicable measures for the just settlement of international disputes. In view of our abiding ideals there is no danger of militarism in this country. We have no policy of aggression, no lust for territory; no zeal for strife. It is in this spirit that we demand adequate provision for national defense and we condemn the inexcusable neglect that has been shown in this matter of first national importance. We must have the strength which self-respect demands, the strength of an efficient nation ready for every emergency.

"Our preparation must be industrial and economic as well as military. Our severest tests will come after the war is over. We must make a fair and wise readjustment of the tariff in accordance with sound protective principle to insure our economic independence and to maintain American standards of living. We must conserve the just interests of labor, realizing that in democracy patriotism and national strength must be rooted in even handed justice. In preventing, as we must, unjust discriminations and monopolistic practices, we must still be zealous to assure the foundations of honest business. Particularly should we seek the expansion of foreign trade. We must not throttle American enterprise here or abroad but rather promote it and take pride in honorable achievements. We must take up the serious problems of transportation, of interstate and foreign commerce, in a sensible and candid manner and provide an enduring basis for prosparity by the intelligent use of the constitutional powers of Congress so as adequately to protect the public on one hand and, on the other, to conserve the essential instrumentalities of progress.

"I stand for the principles of our civil service laws. In every department of government the highest efficiency must be insisted upon. For all laws and programme are vain without efficient and impartial administration.

"I cannot within the limits of this statement speak upon all the subjects that will require attention. I can only say that I fully endorse the platform you have adopted.

"I deeply appreciate the responsibility you impose. I should have been glad to have that responsibility placed upon another. But I shall undertake to meet it, grateful for the confidence you express. I sincerely trust that all former differences may be forgotten and that we may have united effort in a patriotic realization of our national need and opportunity.

"I have resigned my judicial office and I am ready to devote myself unreservedly to the campaign.

"CHARLES E. HUGHES."

NO OCCASION FOR HURRY IN NAMING HUGHES' SUCCESSOR

Washington, June 10.—President Wilson has not yet begun consideration of a successor to Justice Hughes on the Supreme bench. Because of his recent survey of available lawyers prior to the appointment of Justice Brandeis, it was said at the White House tonight that the President could make up his mind quickly, but as the Supreme Court recesses Monday until October, it was thought likely he would not hurry in making a choice.

'Justice Hughes' successor will be the third member of the court named by President Wilson. The resignation today leaves five Republicans and three Democrats on the court. It is expected that Mr. Wilson will appoint a Democrat.

Rome, June 10.—The resignation of the Italian cabinet is momentarily expected. The ministers, however, will remain in power until the king has taken his decision regarding the formation of a new cabinet. The government failed to obtain a majority on a vote last night in the chamber of deputies in the budget of the minister of the interior.

Tub Frocks of the Season

by Hester Winthrop Lane

A Pretty Dress of Net and Ribbon

Organdie Comes Into Its Own with the Flaring Silhouette

Deep Folds of White Pique add Charm to This Linen Frock

French Frock of Hand Embroidered Batiste

A White Tub Frock Season With Accessories Also Snowy White - Neat White Linens Accurately Tailored - Flowered and Striped Voiles for Warm Afternoons.

JUST to show what fashion can do in the way of adding yards of material in a single season, look at the flounced linen frock pictured. Six yards, no less, this skirt measures around the foot and the width is accomplished by gores, gathers and a circular cut so that there is not much fullness over the hips. The tunic, however, is gathered very full at the waistline and its fullness is emphasized by wide bias bands, or flounces, in contrasting color, these flounces matching a band at the foot of the skirt in material and in width. The arrangement of the tunic and loose bodice suggests a redingote effect, with a waistcoat of white pique buttoned at the front and dropping over the skirt a little way. This linen frock is yellow in tone, with waistcoat, sleeve-bands and flounces of ivory white pique. The sleeves will commend themselves to the woman who likes coolness and comfort in summer time. The deep cuffs are slashed up at the back and fastened together with link buttons of white pearl. This model is shown also in brown linen with buff bands and in green linen with striped green and white bands. It is one of the newest and smartest tub models of the season.

A White Season Prophesied.

Because sport clothes are gay colored, frocks and suits which come under the head of tub wearables, are mainly white. White is so attractive on a mid-summer day that there is good excuse for its popularity; and of course white tubs more satisfactorily than anything else—especially in this day of untrustworthy dyestuffs. The white tub suit of linen or pique demands immaculate accessories in the way of hat, veil, gloves, handbag, parasol and boots. A hint of color anywhere takes away just that much charm, though a white linen suit worn with black hat, black and white parasol, black pumps and white silk stockings is very smart indeed. Most women, however, are planning to wear this summer the tall, exquisitely pretty boots of washable kid with white tailored tub costumes, for while these enchanting boots remain in fashion no opportunity for their exploitation must be neglected. Never has boot been invented that made the foot appear so fairylike and altogether alluring. The buttoned models are perhaps the most dainty and becoming to the foot, and now that this washable kid has been discovered—so that two minutes and a wet sponge will make one's footwear immaculate—nobody need be in too much of a hurry to don white boots with her white frock.

Linen Always Useful.

Perhaps there is no type of costume that is so agreeably useful as a white linen frock. The woman who has found this out will never be without one—or two or three, if she can manage it. White linen is so particularly smart when fresh from the laundress; it is cool as a cucumber without "showing through" and making elaborate brassieres and petticoats necessary when one is dressing for an informal occasion; and it is so durable—it will stand one in good stead on an all-day picnic, clambering among rocks, or lounging on a sailboat. And after it has done service all summer long, it will make an excellent house frock through the winter season. An attractive new white linen model, recently observed, has plenty of flare and a rather new arrangement of buttons. The skirt has a plain, ungathered panel front from belt to hem, the sides and back, gathered into the waistband, billowing out jauntily. Rows of hemstitching are set four inches apart all the way up the skirt in the front side and back section—an entirely new method of trimming so far as the scribe is aware. The bodice has loose three-quarter length sleeves falling between elbow and wrist, a row of hemstitching outlining a cuff. The waist opens in front to the waistline over a flat vest of the linen which is hemstitched in rows like the skirt, only with rows much closer together. This front opening tapers toward the waistline to a width of two inches and below the narrow linen belt the opening continues down the skirt for perhaps eight inches, the tapered edges meeting finally in a long point. Buttons and buttonholes flank this tapering front opening its length, in bodice and skirt, and the effect is decidedly novel and smart.

Martial et Armand have brought out a very charming tub tailleur in plain and flowered pique. The flowered fabric is used for the skirt and for a little slashed jacket; the plain pique forms a flaring, gathered overskirt or "apron" which slopes upward from a point touching the skirt hem at the front, to a few inches below the belt at the back, thus revealing almost the entire flowered skirt from the back view of the costume. The coat has a big collar of plain pique and a sash of the plain material passes under the slashed tabs at back and front. These tabs, the skirt and the apron are edged with blue linen braid. This tailleur is of white pique flowered in rose and faint blue. To match there is a blue straw hat trimmed with white and blue ribbon and two pink roses. Boots of blue glazed kid exactly matching the hat finish the effect.

Sport Dresses of Striped Linen.

Among the tub frocks one must surely include sport dresses, not awning stripe sport skirts and blouses—though these of course may be entirely tubbable—but simple sport frocks of striped linen or gingham for morning wear in summer time. The term sport frock is by courtesy only for the true sportswoman who will prefer a sporty looking sport skirt and shirt, but these sport frocks are so practical, so neat and so smart withal that many women will "live" in them all through the morning hours. They have a short, simply cut gored skirt with deep hem and effectively placed patch pockets, and an attached waist also simple in cut and with turned down collar and sleeves that unbutton at the wrist. The smariness of such a costume depends on the good cut, the excellent material used and the correctness of such accessories as belt, hat and boots.

Voiles, Plain and Patterned.

Voile frocks there are a-plenty, also, though frocks of this type—supposedly for afternoon wear in the country—are not as numerous as they were in the days before sport attire became the proper thing for every hour between breakfast and six o'clock at night. In some communities, however, all femininity appears in something cool and dainty at four o'clock in the afternoon, and this something cannot be better than a flowered voile. The new all-over flowered patterns are particularly pretty with trimmings of velvet ribbon bows and the little bows may be snipped off when a tubbing is necessary. Plain and patterned voiles are combined in many models—just as silk and serge, or silk and mohair have been combined in earlier street costumes. Half the skirt may be plain voile, half flowered; the sleeveless bodice flowered and the sleeves plain; or flowered flounces may adorn a foundation of plain voile. There are countless ways to combine materials this season and the dainty voiles offer a rare opportunity in this line. For quaint panniered and 1830 frocks the flowered dimities and organdies are charming and these frocks are worn over petticoats distended with featherbone tubing since bouffancy is the effect aimed at and starch is forbidden in any sheer fabric by fashion. Tub frocks must rely upon these distended petticoats for they may not be faced, like silk costumes with any resilient stiffening. The best of these stiffening fabrics are damp proof, but they are not supposed to be immersed in a washtub of soap and hot water—which is of course the end and the beginning of a satisfactory tub costume.

Organdies In High Favor For Mid-Summer.

Some of the loveliest frocks of the summer will be of organdy, judging by airy models now being finished by the dressmakers. Organdy lends itself well to the billowy effects in fashion and yards and yards of the crisp, sheer fabric go into ruffles, flounces, puffings and shirrings for the new organdy dresses. An organdy frock for a young girl has a skirt eight yards around, tucked from hem to belt by hand; the bodice is also tucked across to match and the sleeves are little puffs with hand-hemmed ruffles. The complete effect is delightfully girlish and charming. There is youthfulness also in the organdy frock pictured—the model with rows of shirring around the hips. Only a slender, girlish figure could stand this very bouffant frock, with its full, gathered waist drawn down into a tiny ribbon sash. This sash is violet in color and the hat is of violet straw with pink and plum-colored roses.

The other organdy frock illustrated today is less bouffant in silhouette but no less charming, and will perhaps please the woman of conservative taste better. It is an expensive little frock in spite of its seeming simplicity, for it is entirely hand-made and the embroidery on skirt, bodice and sleeve is done by hand also.

The model of accordion pleated white Georgette with embroidered bandings and white ribbon edging skirt, tunic and cape collar is called a tub frock by courtesy; it might indeed be washed by a skillful laundress but most women would prefer to pay a dry cleaner's price in the case of so dainty a frock. The little puffed sleeves and deep cape-collar are particularly interesting features.

Parasols Coquet with June Sunshine

EVERY woman knows that a parasol is two distinct and separate things: an implement for shade and an instrument of flirtation. In the first capacity, it may be twirled in its possessor's hand, making a fetching background behind her head and shoulders—or it may be carried attentively over her head by her escort.

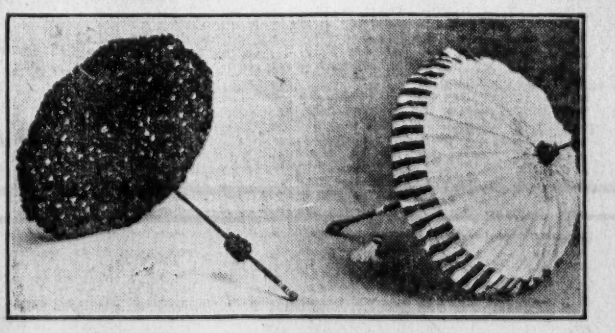

Parasols fairly provoke flirtatiousness this season—they are so coquettish in themselves. The plain coaching styles are used only with severely tailored suits; all other parasols are frilled, gathered, shirred, piped, smocked and garnished with flowers, bowknots or tassels. There are flowered silk models for use with bathing suits trimmed with the same flowered silk; there are airy, transparent parasols designed for coquetry only, for they could not possibly keep out the sun; and there are parasols frankly and obviously intended as backgrounds—most becoming backgrounds for pretty faces and charming hats.

The swallow parasol is having a tremendous vogue. Two or three darting swallows made of black velvet or silk are appliqued against the parasol cover, sometimes inside so that they show only when the parasol is open. There are also white swallows on navy blue parasols, and dark brown swallows on parasols in biscuit or tan shades. The long, slender lines of the swallow in flight are beautiful and the "swift" threatens now to replace the long fashionable bluebird in favor.

There are canopy top parasols, rather small and dainty in size, with long handles—these for use with small, high-crowned hats; and there are wide-spreading, flat parasols on Japanese lines for use with large picture hats of low-crowned type. A parasol called La Debutante is as large around as an umbrella and almost as flat as a pancake, several of the ribs curving up at one side of the cover to show the lining. It is really remarkable how this parasol can change its "expression" when twirled around to make the saucy up-curve of the inner side come in front of the face, at one side, or just back of the shoulder. La Debutante is a lawn-fete parasol, intended for use with elaborate afternoon frocks. Its cover is of white Georgette crepe lined with very thin, flesh pink silk. Around the edge is a double pleating of white net, a piping of black velvet and a line of tiny pink chiffon rosebuds running between the pleatings. This parasol has an enormously long white wood handle, so long that when the parasol is closed and its possessor clasps her hands on the end of the handle, her hands are a trifle above her waistline.

The fad of the moment is the swallow sunshade; an enchanting, summery background for a pretty face.

Flowered silks and smart magpie combinations make this year's parasols pleasing.

Parasol handles are very neat and in conservative style—all the gaiety is in the cover. The handle usually matches the cover, or it may be of polished black wood. Big knobs of colored bone finish many of the parasol handles, and some of the models designed to accompany dressy costumes have bracelets of ribbon or tulle to which are attached little bouquets of artificial flowers. A pretty parasol of this type is of shirred white net, with a double frill of net at the edge. A stiff little nosegay of pink roses and heliotrope is attached to a white tulle bracelet on the handle and the companion nosegay nestles in the net shirring of the cover.

Some of the coaching parasols are made coquettish with many little swinging tassels; a tassel dangling from the end of every rib and from the ferrule where it emerges from the cover. A model of this type comes in navy blue taffeta, with blue tassels and in corn-colored taffeta with tassels to match. Corn-colored parasols are enjoying a special vogue this season and other colors that are evidently fancied, are purple, rose and green. Navy blue parasols are always used and always in good taste; but the navy parasol is usually utilitarian rather than coquettish and accompanies a practical afternoon costume in the same shade.

Black and white parasols this year are charming; one cannot go amiss in selecting a parasol in black and white combination, if a single parasol must do duty with several costumes. Some of these magpie sunshades are checked; some striped; others a combination of the two. Very handsome parasols with black chantilly, or tucked black net over white silk, are ready for use with distinguished matronly costumes. In gayer semblance is a black and white parasol in which bands of crosswise black and white striped taffeta run down the ribs, separating panels of black satin. This parasol has a long handle of carved black and white wood, with an effective black and white silk tassel.

Another attractive black and white parasol has a cover of white satin, is shirred closely at the center, and at the edge, overlaps in a deep tuck, an ungathered flounce of striped black and white satin. The handle is black with a white tassel.

GODWIN FORCES ORGANIZING

Plans Laid for Forming Godwin Clubs Throughout Harnett County His Friends Surprised.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Dunn, N. C., June 10.—Plans were launched here today for the purpose of organizing Godwin clubs throughout Harnett county. The club at Dunn will be organized Tuesday night and thereafter organizations will be perfected at Lillington, Angier, Coats, Duke, and in all the other townships in the county.

It was not thought here up until a day or so ago that Mr. Brown would enter the second primary on account of the small vote he received in certain counties in the district. The returns show that he received in the first primary only 13 votes in Harnett, 30 in Cumberland, 39 in Brunswick and 94 in Bladen, and that Godwin has a straight lead over him of 3,247 votes. Godwin made a strong run in all the counties, carrying his home county of Harnett by a large majority over all the candidates. He also carried Brunswick, Bladen and Robeson counties and led all the other candidates in New Hanover county.

It was generally thought that Mr. Brown would follow the course of Mr. Spence in the Seventh district and not demand a second primary. However, the Godwin forces seem to be ready for the fight. They are thoroughly organized in every county in the district and, if the opposition wants a second primary, the Godwin forces are willing to give it to them. The battle cry in the next primary throughout Harnett county will be "Every Democratic vote in the County for Godwin and 8,000 majority in the Sixth District." G. K. G.

THIRTY-SIX MILLION CORDS OF WOOD WASTE ANNUALLY.

Washington, June 10.—There are more than 48,000 saw mills in the United States, and their output of waste in the form of sawdust, shavings, slabs and other wood refuse is estimated as 36,000,000 cords per year. This is equal to over 4,500,000,000 cubic feet of waste, which is the capacity of a bin one-half mile high with a base covering a 40-acre lot. Or, considering each cord to contain 80 cubic feet of solid wood with all the cracks and air spaces taken out, these 36 million cords would make a block of wood more than a quarter of a mile on each edge.

Perhaps one-half of this so-called waste product is not strictly speaking wasted, but serves a useful purpose as fuel under the boilers. Much of the remaining 18 million cords not only serves no useful purpose, but in most cases is a source of inconvenience and danger, and costs the mill time and money.

Saw mill waste is disposed of in various ways. Some goes to the local fuel market, some to pulp mills or to wood distillation plants. Shavings and hog cuttings, as well as other mill waste, are sometimes used to fill low places in the yard. However, the most common method of getting rid of waste is by burning either in a fire-pit having an open fire which sometimes has a protecting wall on the side towards the mill, or in a burner enclosed on all sides and having a spark-arresting screen at the top and a fire grate near the bottom. In both cases some kind of a conveyor is necessary to bear the waste from the mill to the fire. This is usually a sort of trough with a metal bottom along which a slowly moving chain or cable, equipped with cleats or buckets, carries the waste to the fire.

A closed burner and conveyor costs about $12,000 for a mill of 100,000 feet daily capacity. Forty per cent of the larger mills, cutting more than 55,000 board feet daily, are equipped with closed burners. Forty-five per cent have fire pits. The remainder have neither and dispose of their waste in some other way.

It is estimated that for a mill of 100,000 feet capacity the cost of conveying the waste from the machine where it is made and destroying it in a closed burner is 42 cents per cord, or $10.05 per day. Burners seldom bring in any revenue, although in a few cases ashes are sold for fertilizer, and in a number of others the burner furnishes hot feed water for the boilers.

Both burners and fire pits add to the insurance rates on lumber, and in the case of the pit on the mill itself. In order to reduce the fire hazard to zero, in the case of the burners, it is necessary to keep all lumber piles at least 150 feet away from the burner. The matter is much worse in the case of pits, especially the open ones, which must be kept 300 feet away from the mill and 500 feet away from any lumber piles. When nearer than these distances from the mill and yard respectively, the insurance rates mount up rapidly with closer proximity until they become practically prohibitive when the fire pit is nearer than 100 feet.

No well managed mill would produce waste if it could be avoided. This, however, is not possible, so the next best thing is to seek out some method of utilization of the waste so it will pay for its disposition. The Forest Service is working on this problem but has not yet found a satisfactory solution.

6,000 TAKE FIRST TREATMENT.

Cabarrus County Makes Record in Anti-Typhoid Vaccination Work.

Raleigh, N. C., June 10.—Cabarrus county is breaking this summer's record in anti-typhoid vaccination work. Thursday, at Kannapolis and Concord, 2,000 people were vaccinated and last Saturday at Concord 2,100 took the treatment. These are record numbers for this kind of work, and Dr. A. C. Bulla, the physician in charge, has been able to make these records only through the assistance given him by the local physicians. This anti-typhoid campaign has been on in this county for about three weeks. At the end of the first two weeks, 6,643 people took the first treatment. It is estimated that this week's record will show that the total number taking the first treatment will have increased to more than 7,000.

The business men of the county are especially interested in this means of disease prevention that is given free to the people and believe that it will be a great money-saver to the county as well as to the people themselves, to say nothing of what it will mean to the people in preventing sickness and death from typhoid fever.

WHERE IT ALL STARTED.

Republican Paper Makes Capital Out of Little Piece of Pleasantry.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Kinston, N. C., June 10.—Henry Brothers, Democratic nominee for representative in the General Assembly from Lenoir county, who expects to be elected by between 750 and 1,000 majority, and Will Brothers, a Forsyth county man, are brothers. The latter owns property near here. Recently he paid the taxes on it. He wrote the sheriff here something to the effect that the Democratic administration would lose out because of the high taxes he alleged had been levied. In fact, it is rumored that Mr. Brothers, of Winston-Salem, is of the opposite political faith from his brother in this section. Sheriff Taylor declares that he left the answer up to his young lady stenographer. What she wrote was something like this: "Thanks for the check. We are going to send Henry Brothers to the Legislature and then we will have a law passed keeping Republicans from voting at all." The signature was the sheriff's. A Winston-Salem Republican paper came into possession of a part of the correspondence, making capital of it in apparent seriousness. The joke that had its origin in the court house here is being used to show up some of the allegedly evil ways of the Democratic party "in Eastern Carolina."

RODEHEAVER COMING.

Billy Sunday's Song Leader Coming for Christian Endeavor Convention.

Atlanta, Ga., June 10.—Homer Rodeheaver, Billy Sunday's song leader, is coming to Atlanta July 13-16, to lead the singing in the great All-South Christian Endeavor convention, to be held in the City Auditorium and Atlanta churches.

Mr. Rodeheaver is recognized as the world's greatest leader of singing. It is estimated that he leads more than 6,000,000 people a year in gospel songs. No other man has ever done that. He is truly wonderful.

This is Mr. Rodeheaver's first visit to the far South and the Christian Endeavorers of Dixie consider themselves fortunate in securing this great leader. He will be accompanied on this trip South by Charles H. Gabriel, the sweet-voiced singer and writer of many of the greatest hymns of the church, and Charles H. Gabriel, Jr., who comes along as the pianist of the party.

Two of the unusual musical features of this great convention will be the open air song service and patriotic address on the steps of the Georgia state capitol building Saturday afternoon, July 15. Rodeheaver and Gabriel will lead the singing and Daniel A. Poling, of Boston, will give the address. Mr. Poling is a great orator. Saturday evening there will be 12 great street meetings consisting of songs and a gospel message held on the streets of Atlanta. Each street meeting will be in charge of a different state delegation.

Three thousand delegates from all parts of the South will attend this great convention.

AMATEUR BASEBALL IS GROWING IN INTEREST

Over 100 Cities and Towns Have Regular Leagues

More Than 100,000 Men and Boys Enrolled—National Baseball Federation Proposes World's Amateur Championship.

Johnstown, Pa., June 10. — What city or town or village in these great United States is going to gain the distinction and honor this year of producing the world's amateur baseball champion nine?

As there are at the present time over 100 cities and towns from Maine to California and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico boasting of regularly-organized amateur baseball leagues with over 100,000 men and boys enrolled, it is pretty hard to give any dope that would help answer the above question, but a splendid effort to arrive at the solution is being made by the National Baseball Federation, of which Attorney C. C. Townes, of Cleveland, O., is President, and Tom Nokes, of Johnstown, Pa., is Secretary-Treasurer.

The National Baseball Federation is at present composed of the following 14 cities: Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago, Pittsburg, St. Louis, Birmingham, Ala., Johnstown, Pa., Toledo, O., Des Moines, Ia., Minneapolis, Minn., Akron, O., Dayton, O., Dallas, Tex., and Kansas City, Mo. Applications for membership from other cities are being received right along. It is interesting to note that Johnstown, Pa., Des Moines, Ia., and Toledo, O., were the first cities to pay their dues and be declared in good standing.

The N. B. F. has arranged for two world's baseball championship series next September—one for the strictly amateurs and another for the semi-professional teams. The N. B. F. does not call them by these names, Class A and Class AA being the terms used. A player eligible to Class A is one who receives no monetary remuneration for his services as a player during the current season. A player eligible to Class AA is one who does not earn a livelihood by his services as a player, but who plays an occasional game for which he is paid.

Only those cities holding membership in the N. B. F. will be eligible to compete in the great series, the entries for which must be filed on or before July 1 with Secretary Tom Nokes, Johnstown. The series will commence on September 2. Sectional championships along geographical lines are to be arranged at first, the winners to be brought together in the semi-finals and finals of the competition. It is probable that there will first be championship matches for the New England States, the Middle Atlantic States, the Central West, the Northwest, Southwest, Pacific Coast and South. The districts are to be determined finaly at a meeting of the executive committee of the N. B. F. in Cleveland on July 6, when all the cities desiring to compete will have been listed.

The rules already announced for the championship series provide that to qualify for the series a club must have won the championship of the city it represents (membership in the N. B. F. is based upon city associations embracing all leagues and teams within their confines); that a club entered in the championship series shall be limited to 16 players, including the manager; that no player will be permitted to compete in the championship series who has not played five games with his team, and that a list of players eligible to represent each city in this championship series shall be filed with the secretary of the N. B. F. on or before August 19, so that these lists may be sent to every city entered for comparison purposes. Each city association will be held liable and will be suspended from the Federation if other than eligible players are used in the series.

Chambers of Commerce, park boards, recreation bodies, baseball associations and individuals are supporting the movements in the different cities and towns to be represented in the great world's amateur series under the auspices of the N. B. F. The mere fact that a city or town enters the competition will put it on the baseball map as hardly anything else could do, as the official announcement of the enrollment by the N. B. F. will attract the eyes of baseball players and fans in all parts of the country to the city or town in question.

To gain membership in the National Baseball Federation a city must organize an association or board representing all or as many as possible of the leagues and clubs in that city and must act for these city organizations as a whole. This association or board then applies for affiliation with the N. B. F., and, if accepted, will be constituted the official authority of the city having an association or board affiliated with the N. B. F. is entitled to two votes in the councils of the National body.

The officers of the National Baseball Federation are: President, C. C. Townes, of Cleveland; first vice-president, C. W. Sturr, of Cincinnati; second vice-president, R. H. Abeken, of St. Louis; secretary-treasurer, Tom Nokes, of Johnstown, Pa.; members of the executive committee, W. D. Gresham, of Birmingham, Ala.; Samuel Karpf, of Dayton, O., and W. B. Bickford, of Chicago.

The N. B. F. is engaged in conducting a survey of the amateur baseball conditions in the United States which promises to be of much benefit when completed

CAISON-BUTLER WEDDING AT SALEMBURG BEAUTIFUL AFFAIR

Salemburg, N. C., June 10.—A most beautiful wedding was solemnized on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock when Miss Minnie Olieta Butler was married to Mr. Daniel Eugene Caison. The church was artistically decorated in ivy and pink roses. The potted plants with the white back ground added greatly to the beauty.

Miss Dixie Underwood presided at the piano accompanied by Miss Hesba Hedgespeth on the violin. Before the ceremony Miss Lillian Barker, of Lumberton, sang "Because," by D. Hardelot.

Strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march announced the coming of the bridal party, the ushers, Messrs J. Abner Barker, Jessie Harris, Marvin White and Ed Caison, coming first. Down the left aisle came the bridesmaids gowned alternately in white georgette crepe trimmed in old English lace and Nile green taffeta with pearl trimmings, while down the right aisle came the groomsmen dressed in full evening. The bridesmaids were Misses Eunice Caison, Lossie Herring, Bertha Crumpler, Mary Bell Ricks, Lizzie Crumpler, Oleitta Highsmith, Bessie Hollingsworth and Lucile Johnson. The groomsmen were Messrs. Perry Crumpler, Elliott Matthews, Frank Williamson, Sebron Royal, Buch Hollingsworth, Jink Melvin and Earl Royal. Down the center aisle came the maid of honor, Miss Nell Elizabeth Butler, sister of the bride, beautifully gowned in georgette crepe over pink chiffon taffeta, carrying a bouquet of white carnations, with little Robert Faison Butler, nephew of the bride, dressed in pink linen, bearing two lighted candles placed in silver candle holders. (These were used at the marriage of the bride's father and mother). Following him came the flower girls, little Misses Mary Kate McLamb and Ruth Mills, dressed in white organdie, carrying baskets of pink carnations and roses. The bride was never more beautiful than when she entered on the arm of her father, Mr. Robert Neil Butler, who gave her away. She wore a suit of Copenhagen satin and cloth, with hat, gloves, shoes and accessories to match. She carried a shower bouquet of carnations, sweet peas and maiden hair fern, tied with tulle. She was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Mr. Robert Johnson, of Garland, N. C. Here their pastor, Rev. W. J. Jones, in a most impressive manner pronounced the vows that made them husband and wife. As this was announced the little candle bearer extinguished one light. A prayer was offered for the health, happiness and usefulness of this couple. During the ceremony "To a Wild Rose" was rendered. As a recessional "Thanhauser's March" by Wagner was used.

Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party left in automobiles for Roseboro where amid showers of rice and many good wishes, the bride and groom left on a north-bound train for Washington, Baltimore, New York and other points North. After June the 10th they will be at home to their many friends in Parkersburg.

The bride is a favorite among Salemburg's younger social set. She is accomplished and attractive. By her sweet disposition and refined character she has won many friends. The groom is a man of sterling worth and is known for his great ability, having made splendid success in the mercantile business. The many handsome presents attest in part the esteem in which this popular young couple are held by their friends.

There were many out-of-town guests to witness this marriage. Among them were Misses Lillian and Bertha Barker, of Lumberton; Mr. and Mrs. Jno. S. Butler, of St. Pauls, N. C.; Misses Mary Bell Ricks and Hesba Hedgepeth, of Fairmont; Mr. and Mrs. Junius R. Butler, Mrs. Minnie Crumpler, Misses Olieta Highsmith, Lizzie Crumpler, Messrs. Perry Crumpler and Lindell Powell, of Clinton; Messrs. Robert Johnson and Claud Caison and Misses Lucile and Olivia Johnson, of Garland.

Prior to the marriage a reception was given by Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Butler, father and mother of the bride. Delicious cake and ice cream was served by Misses Havens White, Rometa Cooper, Revah Newton and Viola Royal. About 100 friends enjoyed the reception. There was much merriment in the cutting of the bride's cake, the ring going to Miss Lossie Herring and the dime to Mr. Elliott Matthews, the rag, thimble and button going to parties who do not care "to be" what these indicate. Mrs. Jno. S. Butler, of St. Pauls, sister of the bride, presided at the table where each guest entered their names in the bride's book. It was altogether a most delightful reception and each and every one enjoyed the kind hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Butler.

GOOD HEALTH: GOOD ROADS

President of National Highway Association Shows the Relation.

That good roads are conducive to good health is one of the best arguments advanced by Mr. Charles Henry Davis, C. E., president of the National Highway Association, in favor of good roads. He says:

"Given the same density of population, the town with better roads has the smallest percentage both of disease and deaths. When statistics show this is almost invariably the case, there must be some connection between good roads and health.

"It is true that a town with good roads is a progressive town with a health board that is correspondingly well informed and alert, but it is also true that good roads have directly contributed to the progressive spirit. In short, money has rolled in over their well-kept surfaces. Through them the town has become wealthier and wiser, and better health protection is a natural result."

Again he says: "A community to be wholly healthy must not be a "queer" community. It must take a sane interest in its business, and the relation of its business to the outside world. It must mix with other people besides its own immediate neighbors. In other words, it must come out of itself and to do this it must look to its roads.

"Where the roads are heavy, narrow, muddy and impassable, the community becomes segregated; a quiet backwater, quaint, but useless in our national progress, and sometimes queer and dangerous. It becomes the breed place of insanity and perversion, a cancerous and vexed spot of mental ills and moral contagion that spreads as rapidly and leaves as sanguinary effects any of the epidemics known to medicine."

TO BUILD NEW CHURCH.

Baptists of Hamlet Take Important Forward Step.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Hamlet, N. C., June 10.—The Baptist denomination in Hamlet has decided to build a new church and parsonage. At the meeting of the congregation last Sunday it was decided to purchase another location and as soon as the new building was completed to sell the present church property. A new location has been secured on the corner of Wilmington and Charlotte streets, which location is within one-half block of the present location, is adjoining the Presbyterian church, and one block from the Methodist church. The location is one of the most desirable in town, the lot being 150 feet on Charlotte street and 200 feet on Wilmington street.

Plans are now being drawn for a church and Sunday school building that will cost about $15,000, and work will begin as soon as the plans are secured.

The Baptist parsonage, which was built about three years ago, will also be sold and the new parsonage built on the lot adjoining the church.

The Baptist denomination, under the leadership of Rev. A. T. Howell, has grown wonderfully during his four years' pastorate in Hamlet.

THE RECORDERSHIP

Lawyer Approves Mr. Empie and States Why He Does So.

The Recorder is a judicial officer. He exercises powers usually conferred only on a Superior Court judge. He has jurisdiction of all criminal matters, except certain felonies and capital cases, and appeals lie from the magistrates to his court. He has jurisdiction in civil causes where the amount involved does not exceed five-hundred dollars, in torts and one thousand in contract. To the litigant, whose case involves only small matters, the character of the judge of this court is as vital as to the man of larger interests.

The Recorder should be a man of high character, merciful and just, impartial and incorruptible, and of an independence of spirit that would not submit to dictation. He should be a lawyer. As mechanics, physicians, men of other professions and trades are employed, each in his line, so the trained lawyer, imbued with the spirit and principles of the law, should be elected to fill this judicial office.

Honorable Brooke G. Empie, is an intelligent and experienced lawyer. His life and character, which have been an open book, with unstained leaves, meet every test of character for this judicial office. No one questions this. No one can question it. Everybody concedes it. Objection is made in certain quarters that he is too lenient in the administration of the law—that's all! and men, who are not present at trials in his court and who do not know the facts upon which he acts, glibly assert it as if it were a crime. The enforcement of law does not invoke severity. The United States constitution proclaims against cruel and unusual punishments. All true men and great judges are merciful. Justice should always be tempered with mercy. It is the narrow soul and little mind that clamors for revenge upon the convicted. Mr. Empie's leniency has been tempered with Justice.

" we do pray for mercy,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render,
The deeds of mercy."

I admire Mr. Empie for his kindly temperament in dealing with the petty offenders. I admire his independence in not yielding to the demands of certain interested and fanatical people his judgment as to the facts and circumstances of the cases before him. It is not the law that gentlemen want to enforce. It is their kind of law that they would have enforced. When it comes to using the public moneys in violation of the constitution, the statute law and decided cases, so that they may entertain public guests, instead of paying the bills themselves, they have no compunction of conscience about having the city fathers and county commissioners to appropriate money for such illegal purpose and would quickly invoke the mercy of the court, if these officials were indicted as the law would require. It affords a kind of cheap self exploitation to appear as holy and righteous in calling for severe punishments upon these petty offenders, but the duty of the court is to deal justly with each individual case without dictation from any source. And this is the height of Mr. Empie's offending.

I propose to mention certain criticisms that have been made as typical of the small talk which is heard. One good minister referred to the case of a woman named Bently—in fact, several criticisms were made to me while it was pending. These gentlemen, always looking for blind tigers, wanted an example made of her. She was indicted for selling liquor. Mr Empie gave her six months on the roads. Whatever might be said about her, she was the only support of an old invalid mother. She appealed even from this sentence. She could give no bond. Either she had to go to jail, while waiting trial in the Superior Court, in which case there was no one to look after the mother, or the court would have to recognize her for her appearance. Mr Empie did the latter. He was criticised at once for this show of mercy. Which would you have done, gentle reader? Consult your heart and answer. But the woman appeared at the Superior Court, as she agreed to do, stood her trial, and was acquitted before a jury in both cases. Funny, is it not, that certain gentlemen more interested in her punishment than in the facts of the case have not, since the acquittal, ceased to gab about Mr. Empie's awful leniency! This case is typical of the kind of leniency exercised by Mr. Empie that is made the topic of his opponents' deprecation of him. It is not the law that certain of his critics want enforced. It is their kind of law and their way of enforcement they would demand. It is not his leniency, which they pretend as their real objection, but the fact that they cannot dictate his judgments, which is the occasion of their opposition. Not having anything else about which to make an issue they would mislead the voter by the hue and cry of too much leniency.

This is written, without suggestion of Mr. Empie or his friends, on my own responsibility. It is prompted by the desire to see Mr. Empie re-elected to the bench, because he gives dignity and character to the office, both personally and professionally, and hands out the "square deal" in the administration of the law, without regard to the person or persons who may like or dislike his action.

ROOSEVELT DECLINES FOR TIME BEING TO ACCEPT NOMINATION

minor differences" and reach a common ground if possible.

The telegram reiterated his "appeal" to the two conventions made in his telegram to former Senator Jackson.

"I ask you members of the Progressive convention to make these words good by deeds," Colonel Roosevelt said.

Expressing appreciation for the Progressives' loyalty to him Mr. Roosevelt said the Progressives had pledged themselves to reach an honorable agreement if possible.

Presented Senator Lodge's Name.

"In view of the conditions I present the name of Senator Lodge of Massachusetts," the Colonel's message said.

Loud cries of "no, no," came from the floor.

"I urge you to present his name," said Colonel Roosevelt, "and if you do not agree with me, present it to the Republican convention at the same time. The nomination of Senator Lodge will meet vital needs."

Again loud cries of "No, no," came from all parts of the hall.

Less than a minute later Chairman Robins called for nomination of a president and recognized Bainbridge Colby, of New York, to nominate Colonel Roosevelt.

"Once more, thank God," began Mr. Colby, "we have a militant army of Progressives. I know the name that is in your hearts and on your lips.

"For four days the convention has held itself in check. We are doing more than voice our thought, we are voicing the thought of the people of the nation. This is the only convention through which the voice of the people can speak.

"I present to you that man who is the embodiment of every issue of the hour, that man that we delight to honor—Theodore Roosevelt."

Pandemonium followed. It was announced that the Republicans had begun balloting. Governor Johnson arose to second Colonel Roosevelt's nomination.

"There comes a time when every man faces the guns," he said, "its time now to put it up to Colonel Roosevelt what he will do."

Governor Johnson suggested nominating Colonel Roosevelt and adjourning for two hours and placing the question of acceptance "face to face to Colonel Roosevelt right now." And a bedlam of sound he seconded the name and added that the nomination be presented instantly.

Nominated by Acclamation.

Chairman Robins said he would suspend the rules and have the nomination made by acclamation. He put the question:

"All in favor of Colonel Roosevelt's nomination by acclamation, please rise."

In one body the immense throng arose in a roar. The following demonstration lasted two minutes.

Chairman Robins then announced:

"The chairman announces that by acclamation the Progressive convention has nominated Theodore Roosevelt for President of the United States."

Another demonstration followed, leaders on the stage and delegates on the floor shrieking hysterically, hugging each other and throwing hats in the air. The convention then recessed until 3 o'clock.

Parker's Nomination Unanimous.

After the recess the convention proceeded to vice presidential nominations. Col. John M. Parker, of Louisiana, was nominated by Everett Colby, of New Jersey. Delegates from Georgia and many other states seconded the nomination.

In endorsing Colonel Parker, speeches were made declaring such action would help to wipe out sectional feeling.

Although Governor Johnson had been nominated by a Kentucky delegate, he seconded Colonel Parker's nomination.

"In this peculiar situation," he continued, "it is proposed that a man from the Southern states should be the running mate of our leader." He moved that the nomination be made unanimous. The motion was carried with a tremendous ovation and not a dissenting voice.

Governor Johnson and Henry Allen escorted Colonel Parker to the platform, where he was given three cheers. Thanking the convention for the nomination, he said he did not come here as a candidate, declaring the convention was a protest against the ability of a few men to control the destiny of 100,000,000 people.

Beat Republicans to It.

Victor Murdock then said he understood "we beat the other fellows at the Coliseum about 30 seconds. If you fellows will work as hard as you shout, we'll beat them in November. They have started at the Coliseum what they think is a band wagon, but if any of this crowd tries to get aboard they'll find it an ice wagon."

Mr. Murdock said he always got the "worst of it" in treating with the Republicans.

The only way to have forced the Republican nomination on Theodore Roosevelt was to have done it early, he continued. "But you didn't do it. You appointed a conference committee and you know what happened—what invariably happens when a Progressive meets a Republican politician.

"I am not sore or sad, but I am impressed with the tremendous force against us, power, money, everything. Yet if we keep our motives pure, if we go out radiant in this cause, some things will happen in this country that will help us out."

Looks at Mr. Bryan.

Turning to press boxes, Mr. Murdock looked dramatically at W. J. Bryan, who was sitting there. Mr. Bryan smiled.

"Mr. Bryan is a straight-forward pacifist," said Mr. Murdock. "He is going to have a military plank rammed down his throat at St. Louis and he won't stand it."

Mr. Bryan smiled again and when Mr. Murdock said he expected a new "peace and prohibition" party headed by Mr. Bryan and Henry Ford, the former secretary threw back his head and laughed heartily.

"Mr. Bryan has stood by his convictions," continued Mr. Murdock and the convention yelled approval.

Mr. Murdock said with a four-cornered fight—Wilson and Marshall, and "that tribute to the Arctic Circle, Hughes and Fairbanks" with Bryan and Ford behind "peace and prohibition" and the Progressives with "Roosevelt and Parker" for Americanism, peace and preparedness, the country would see a most remarkable campaign.

The crowd yelled for a speech from Bryan but he shook his head with a smile.

Chairman Robins then called for a "convention campaign contribution."

Delegate Lewis Emory, of Pennsylvania, led with a contribution of $10,000. Mrs. John Bird announced a similar gift. The New Jersey delegation pledged $20,000.

Gifford Pinchot pledged $5,000 and Charles G. Bird pledged the same amount. William Flynn gave another $5,000 as did William Decker, of Montgomery, Ohio; H. H. Timpkin, of Ohio; Irving R. Kirkwood, of Missouri, and others.

NOTICE.

There has been circulated a leaflet, entitled: "An Appeal to Reason," addressed to "The Voters of New Hanover County," in which there is tabulated a record of the different offices now held by relatives of Mr. George Harriss, aspirant for the office of Recorder, in the State and in the County of New Hanover, and tho' the circular is couched in language to which no one can take exception, and is complimentary to the ability and efficiency of each several officials named therein, I wish to say that it was published without my knowledge or consent, and without my direction, and the first intimation I had of its publication was when I saw the circular on the street. BROWN'S AND GODWIN'S FRIENDS GETTING BUSY

Columbus Man's Strength Rapidly Growing at Red Springs

Correspondent Tells Something of the Remarkable History and Development of the Old Antioch Church and Community.

(Special Star Correspondence).

Red Springs, N. C., June 10.—Interest now turns to the second congressional primary between Messrs. Godwin and Brown and friends of both candidates are getting busy. While Mr. Godwin says he is running on his record, Brown's friends claim that he, too, has a record as a public official of which Democracy should be proud and is proud and that, if he is elected to Congress, in ten years he will have a record of which his constituents will be proud, that he will do something for his folks.

The memory of man runneth not to the contrary when a lawyer was not the representative from the Sixth district, yet 80 per cent of the voters are non-professional men and entitled to representation, so Mr. Brown's friends say. The writer does not predict the results of the second primary, but he does know that in this section the forces of Brown are daily growing in numbers and in determination and will see that Brown gets all that's coming to him.

Your correspondent a few days ago visited Antioch (where the disciples were first called Christians). I am interested in the historic old place for two reasons, first, because it's home and to me the most sacred spot on earth and sleeping beneath her sod are many who are bone of my bone and flesh of my flesh. This place derives its name from the old Presbyterian church located on the brink of the hill of "Big Raft Swamp." Here for more than a century the saints and sinners of several generations have worshipped God according to the dictates of their own conscience.

To the Presbyterian ministry this church gave seven of her choicest sons, namely: Rev. J. A. Smith, who afterwards joined the Baptist church and gave to them a long life of usefulness, having died a few years ago in the city of Wilmington, which city and whose people he loved so well: Rev. John G. Conoly, who a few years ago while serving as pastor of the Presbyterian church at Darien, Ga., heard the summons and went up higher; Rev. Archie McLaughlin, now pastor of a Presbyterian church at Riverdale, Ga.; Rev. A. M. McLauchlin, pastor of Ora Street church, Asheville, N. C.; Rev. M. B. McLauchlin, who a year ago died in the harness while serving the church at Effingham, S. C.; Rev. D. A. McNeill, assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Norfolk., and—though mentioned last he by no means comes last—Rev. Chas. E. Hodgin, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian church, of Greensboro. Of Antioch's younger preachers, none tower above Charlie Hodgin. He is today recognized as one of the leading preachers and Presbyters of the North Carolina Synod.

To the medical profession Antioch gave at least three of her sons, possibly more: Dr. Angus Bethune, Dr. Angus Currie, now of blessed memory, and Dr. H. H. Hodgin, who is one of Robeson's leading physicians, living in Red Springs. To the legal profession she claims the honor of having furnished North Carolina with one of her most brilliant legal lights, the late Col. Neill Archibald McLean, of Lumberton, who spent his first years at Antioch.

This is a typical Scotch section. Here among the older settlers you find Smiths, Browns, Bathunes, McLeans, McPhauls, McGougans, McInnesses, Curries, Conolys, McKenzies and too many other direct descendants of the Gael to mention them all. The present chairman of Hoke county's board of commissioners is an Antiochian, John A. McPhaul. Hoke's superintendent of schools is another Antiochian, Prof. John. A. McGougan. Hoke's chairman of the board of education also lives at Antioch, John A. Hodgin. Hoke's past, present and doubtless future sheriff, Edgar Hall, is an Antiochian. Thus she has furnished both church and State her quota of men who stand shoulder to shoulder among the leading men of today.

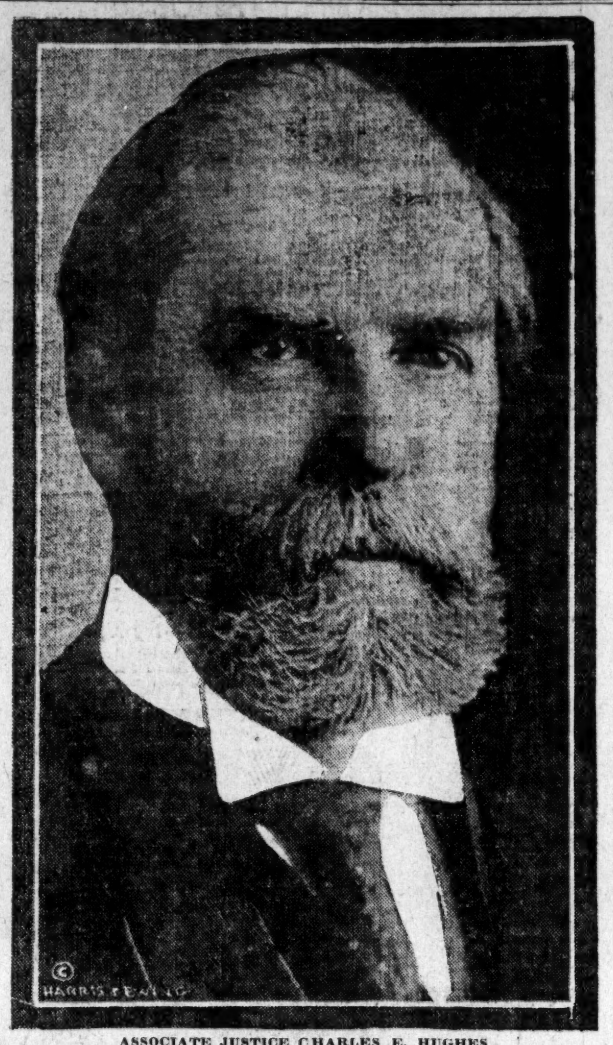

Today the old wooden school building is preserved only as a precious heirloom of the past. Located on a beautiful eminence, beautiful for situation, you will observe a two-story brick building with all modern conveniences. The one-teacher school of two to three months has given place to the graded school of twelve grades and six teachers and a nine months term, where boys and girls are prepared for any college or university or for the active and practical things in life.

The old church with a preacher serving once or twice a month has given place to a newer and more modern building, a nice manse built for the preacher who lives there among his people and preaches to them every Sunday. The present pastor is Rev. Dr. V. R. Gaston and there are none better. His people all love him. Antioch is a rural village, the farmers living, most of them, in sight of their neighbors. The farms vary in size from the small two-horse farm to those of twenty or more. We do not recall an unpainted farm house in all this Antioch section—a section of ten miles square. Antioch is located five miles from Red Springs, the nearest railroad point, yet they have good roads, automobiles, telephones and daily free delivery of mails. They read their daily paper half an hour later than the people in Red Springs.

But there is a reason for this community's going forward. We think we know it. First, they all pull together—very few drones at Antioch—and then some of this section's leading men live there. Among others we note J. A. Hodgin, farmer and general merchant and director in the bank of Red Springs. Hodgin's store, handed down from his father, the late H. H. Hodgin, has been the leading country store of this section for many years and has

BANKS AND BUSINESS AND THE ROCKS AHEAD

American Banking Houses Entering Foreign Fields.

Dangers in Piling up Heavy Stocks of Goods—The Dyestuffs Difficulty. Bensine Wogans' Denth Record—Gotham Gossip.

New York, June 10.—Travelers to foreign countries are telling a different story from that heard before the war. Then there was constant complaint because there were no American banking facilities in the Central and South American countries. Canada, Germany and England had outdistanced the United States in the extension of institutions of finance. However, an American bank is now to be found in China, and extensions of the facilities of the United States banks are to be carried to Milan, Italy; Valparaiso, Chile; Bahia, Brazil; Santiago, Cuba and Porto Rico. Establishments already exist in various parts of Central America, South America and Panama.

In the opinion of one of New York's largest banking institutions, the trade between the United States and South America is now showing a good degree of extension, notwithstanding the many difficulties of over-sea commerce at this time. New York, which is sometimes called the "bank of the world," fully realizes that business conditions are extraordinary and subject to change, and its most conservative financiers have sought to impress this truth upon the whole country, in order to check the general tendency of overbuying, which has been prompted by rising prices and fear of inability to get goods later. There have been tremendous inflations in some lines of merchandising, and the unprecedented demand for most lines of goods has not been die entirely to the increased consumption of all staple articles. While there is heavy buying from jobbers and manufacturers, still there is a general recognition of the probability that a readjustment of prices will have to be made at a lower level after the war is over, and no one will desire to enter that period with heavy stocks of merchandise on hand. While the United States is enjoying phenomenal prosperity, yet it is evident that the more conservative business interests in New York and elsewhere are using every precaution to prevent a slump later on.

One of the most intricate problems that manufacturers have had to face since the beginning of the war has concerned dyestuffs. It is reported that one very large institution that has built up a great reputation for the quality of its writing ink, has suspended manufacturing because it refuses to market an inferior ink—and it says that this is the only way in which writing inks can be produced at this time. There is one American dye manufacturer who is very optimistic about the situation—though it is but fair to say that he is in a somewhat lonely position, as is attested by the troubles among silk and cotton goods manufacturers. However, it is very cheerful

GREEK PORT CHANGED VASTLY BY GREAT WAR

Correspondent Pictures Piraeus Now and Two Years Ago

Even Steamship Offices, Once so Busy, Now are Deserted and Forlorn. Much Poverty and Suffering in Evidence.

(Correspondence of Associated Press.)

Piraeus, Greece, May 30.—The port of Piraeus possesses today a vastly different aspect from that of a year and a half ago. The conspicuous offices of the Hamburg-Amerika, Norddeutscher Lloyd and Austrian Lloyd lines, deserted and forlorn where once so busy, mark the passing of a considerable factor in the marine activity of the port of Athens. Only three smokeless, neglected-looking vessels, moored stern to at the far sea wall, represent in their interned inaction the sea power that once was Germany in these waters.

Grain ships from America or the Argentine, tank steamers, huge transports swarming with Greek soldiers, tiny coasting vessels, towering trans-Atlantics—all these crowd the Greek harbor. Along the quay lines the finnance of the Foresight, a British dispatch vessel, flying the red Union Jack; beyond the custom house is moored an Italian passenger steamship displaying the red, white and green; occasionally a hulking, round-shouldered workman of a Messageries Maritimes packet slips into port with the French tri-color flying and slips out again within a few hours. Save for these, where once the German, Austrian, Turkish and Rumanian flags abounded, now all the busy basin reveals only the blue and white stripes and the white cross on a blue ground of Hellas. On the quays, too, where once German was a current tongue, one hears now some Italian, a very little English, a scattering of French—and all the rest is Greek.

A queer spot, Piraeus, guarding still much of the primitiveness that Athens in a measure has outgrown. Here the East is cheek by jowl with the West. Dirt, the mark of the East, is paramount. Yet sitting before a cafe, the amber stem of a narghila caught between his lips, a white-skirted farmer from the Attic hills watches an automobile sprinkling cart—of a model so improved that perhaps few American cities boast the like—lay the dust and splash the passerby with equal effectiveness.

Surrounding a long-haired religious fanatic, mounted on a municipal refuse can far better than those to be seen in New York, is a crowd that includes sturdy Cretans in baggy bloomers and high boots; Macedonian refugee women in colorful peasant costume; and neat, blue-clad sailors of the Greek navy, whose smart appearance is due probably to the work of the British Naval Mission, by whose seamanship dates from the days of Jason and Ulysees.

The electric cars of Berlin are not more perfectly appointed than those of Piraeus. Behind one comes a funeral—a funeral of the people. The long-haired, long-bearded, black-robed priest rides in a broken-down cab at the head of the procession; an acolyte in white surplice and black toque crossed with gold braid, sits on the box beside the coachman, a brass, cross-capped staff

The Patriotism of Service.

"The Patriotism of Service" was the subject of the eloquent and impressive commencement address delivered here Wednesday morning by former Governor Joseph W. Folk, of Missouri. After the address the degree of bachelor of arts was conferred upon 71 persons, the degree of master of arts upon 15, the honorary degree of doctor of divinity upon one, and the honorary degree of doctor of laws upon three.

Former Governor Folk's address was in part as follows:

"There never was a time when the principles of service and of brotherhood were more generally accepted between man and man than now; there never was a time when those principles were more generally disregarded among the nations of the earth than at present but the morning of another day appears to be near. The public is no longer the people of one section or one nation, but all mankind, and the principles that determine the heartbeats of humanity should now be applied between nations as they have long been between individuals.

"No nation can now live to itself and for itself alone. What each natior does affects in some degree the people of every other nation. These new conditions make it appropriate for the welfare of all that the rights of man be recognized and enforced by the common will through federated action If there be born from th agony of Europe's battlefields an irresistible demand for some international arrangement to maintain the permanent peace of the world, then all the sacrifices of blood and treasure will not have been in vain.

"Men now living may see the day when the world will be ruled by right instead of might, by justice instead of selfishness. Men now living may see the day when the idea of public right will be controlling throughout the world. Out of the black clouds of war that now envelop the Old World may come the remedy of a greater realization for the necessity of an international court of arbitration with power to enforce its decrees. Then will dawn that new day foretold of old following the last great battle of the world when there will be peace on earth and good will in the hearts of the children of men, and when each man's good will be all men's aim.

Preparedness Necessary.

"But that time is not now, and as long as other nations are armed for offense, we have no option but to be prepared for defense. The American spirit is as strong today as it was in the days that gave birth to the republic. There is now but one heart in all, and that the heart of America. If unhappily we should be drawn into the mighty conflict now desolating the Old World, we would meet the emergency as one with a common and resolute purpose.

"Americanism is not a matter of birthplace or national descent, but an ideal of the spirit and of the mind. The mission of America is to uplift mankind, not by the bayonet and bullet, but by holding aloft the American ideals of right, of justice, and of service. The eyes of the hopeful of all the earth are turned with anxiety upon us as the only depository of the sacred fire of brotherhood now in danger of being extinguished in the flood of human bloodshed across the sea. Though we may deplore the horrors of war and abhor its sacrifice and its suffering, we can but admire the sublime courage with which countless thousands of men march down into the Valley of the Shadow of Death for their country's glory and their country's honor. When men shall learn to serve their country as devotedly in peace as in war, when men shall be willing to sacrifice a little for the common good in everyday life as they are to give the last full measure on the battlefield, then the ideals represented by Americanism will be realized.

"There is a constant battle between the welfare of all and the greed of a few, between service and selfishness, between good and bad. The welfare of all, the unselfish, the good, and the right must always be fought for; the selfish, the wrong, and the bad must be fought against. A government neglected by the soldiers of the common good will not become a government for the welfare of all, but will surely become a government for the greed of a few.

NEARLY 200,000 BOYS IN CAMP THIS SUMMER

Boy Scout Preparedness in All Parts of the Country

Military Drill Will Not be Given the Boys But in Other Respects the Training Will be Similar to That at Plattsburg.

New York, June 10.—Nearly 200,000 boys will go into preparedness camps in all parts of the country this summer under the leadership of men identified with the Boy Scouts of America, according to an announcement made at the organization's headquarters here today. Military drill will not be given the boys but in other ways the camps will be very similar to the military instruction camps for adults at Plattsburg, N. Y., and other places.

"An analysis of the programme for the Plattsburg and similar camps promoted by General Leonard A. Wood reveals that fully three-quarters of the subjects and activities taken up in them are included in the Boy Scout scheme," the statement reads, "and they will be provided in this summer's boy scout camps, the first of which will open next week."

The aims in view, it is explained, are not only to build the boys physically but to give them "knowledge and skill that will immeasurably increase their usefulness to their country in any crisis." Under this plan the following subjects are included in the course of instruction:

Camp-site selection, tent pitching, drainage, sanitation, commissary equipment and management, fire lighting without matches, cooking, long distance code signaling, setting up of field telegraph and wireless outfits, bridge building, construction of signal and observation towers, fire fighting, swimming, rescue of drowning person, resuscitation, managing boats, first aid to injured, observation and memory tests, map making and reading, exploration of unfamiliar territory, and despatch bearing. In addition the scouts will learn, largely through games and competitions which quicken boyish interest, a great deal about nature and will be taught to put into practice the code of conduct known to them as "scout law". The camp motto will be "be prepared," which has been the boy scout slogan since the incorporation of the movement in 1910.

"The most ardent preparedness advocate of today," the statement declares, "has added nothing new to the arguments that were recognized by the promoters of the boy scout scheme; indeed, the scout scheme goes further and provides a workable plan, one that is actually working, for preparedness for everyday life, for the routine requirements of citizenship, as well as for emergencies, including the remote possibility of war."

In explanation of the fact that the boys will not receive military drill, the statement says:

"The rifle, the sword and other military accoutrements form no part of the boy scout equipment. The boy, in his adolescent years, we feel, is not sufficiently benefited by practice in the manual of arms to have it take the

MANNING FAILED TO GET MAJORITY OF VOTES CAST

However, He Received 24,000 More Than Next Highest

Jones Expected to Not Demand Second Primary—State Board of Agriculture Meets Monday. Charters Are Issued.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Raleigh, N. C., June 10.—The State Board of Elections was still short today the Tyrrell county State-wide primary vote, being deterred from making up the grand totals for the various candidates on this account. Also, they had only unofficial returns from Pamlico county.

While Judge Manning, in the race for attorney general, did not receive a majority of the votes cast, he did get 24,410 more votes than his nearest competitor, Edmund Jones, who has 18,881 with Tyrrell not included. Manning lacks only about 600 votes of having two and one-half times more votes than Edmund Jones. This constrains members of the State board and others to believe that there is still no probability of any second primary. It is believed that since Jones proposed that teh highest man be declared the nominee in the first primary, he will not demand a second, yielding the nomination to Manning. However, the State board will serve notice on Manning and Jones as soon as the official vote can be declared. As the attorney general vote now stands it is Manning 43,291; Jones 18,881; Calvert 12,831, and Sinclair 18,029. The total vote, less Tyrrell county, is 93, 052.

The finance committee of the State Board of Agriculture was auditing the books of the Department of Agriculture today in preparation for the semi-annual meeting of the board, which convenes Monday. This auditing is by C. W. Mitchell, of Bertie; R. L. Woodard, of Pamlico county, and C. C. Wright, of Wilkes. The board meets Monday and will receive the annual report of Commissioner Graham and the heads of the divisions of the department before getting into the regular work of the department and the making of the budget for the ensuing six months of the departmental work.

A charter is issued for the City Real Estate Co., of High Point, capital $100,000 authorized and $4,000 subscribed by J. Elwood Cox, C. M. Hauser and R. H. Wheeler for general real estate development.

Another charter is for the Bishop Laundry, of Rocky Mount, capital $10,000 authorized and $8,000 subscribed by R. H. Ricks, T. L. Stroud and others for a general laundry business.

TO ARGUE LUMBER RATE CASE

J .O. Carr, Esq., and Matt H. Allen, Esq., Gone to Washington.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Goldsboro, N. C. June 10.—Matt H. Allen, of Goldsboro, and J. O. Carr, of Wilmington, left yesterday for Washington, D. C., where today they will argue the lumber rate case before the Interstate Commerce Commission. Complainants are Whiteville Lumber Co., Enterprise Lumber Co., Empire Manufacturing Co., and others. The proceeding is instituted for lower lumber rate for Eastern, North Carolina.

BRONZE GODDESS FAILS TO "ENLIGHTEN" WORLD

Money Being Raised to Illuminate Liberty at Night.

American Youth Has Thrilling Experiences in Europe—Club Women Federation Meets in Improvised Forest.

New York, June 10.—Perhaps few people have passed the Statue of Liberty at night without feeling that this wonderful landmark ought not to remain shrouded in a mantle of darkness. In clear weather this wonderful gift of France to the people of the United States does full justice to its mission of "Enlightening the World," but at night, except for a beacon at the apex of the statue, there is no illumination. Thirty thousand dollars is needed to install a lighting plant.

The amount is being raised, and one of the metropolitan newspapers heads the subscription list with $1,000, and expresses the hope that the remaining $29,000 may come from as many patriotic Americans as there are dollars to be collected. The plan is to make the movement entirely popular, and therefore small subscriptions, including pennies, nickles and dimes, are to be solicited. The Statue of Liberty was placed on Bedloe's Island in the Harbor of New York in 1886, and the inauguration ceremonies were celebrated in the presence of 1,000,000 people. Grover Cleveland was president of the United States at that time, and he was in attendance.

Another statue that has attracted public attention is that of Horace reeley which has long occupied a very fitting place in front of the New York Tribune, the newspaper he founded. For many years the Greeley Statue has stood upon the sidewalk in one of the most congested parts of the city, notwithstanding that its presence is a violation of city ordinances, which have been enforced against every class of property holders, who were obliged to remove all obstructions that projected over the building line. In order that the statue may remain permanently in an appropriate place, it will be presented to the city of New York, and given a place in the immediate neighborhood of the locality historically associated with the making of newspapers, and which Horace Greeley helped make famous. City Hall Park, which faces Printing House Square, will undoubtedly be chosen as a permanent site for the statue.

When Albert K. Dawson was a boy in his native town of Vincennes, Indiana, he dreamed that some day he would see the great wide world. American boys somehow are apt to have such notions. Dawson grew to manhood, and became a junior member of the firm of Brown & Dawson, photographers, at Stamford, Connecticut. Two months after the war broke out, young Dawson started for Europe, where he followed the armies of the Central powers for eighteen months. His experiences were enough to satisfy any ordinary appetite for adventure. On one occasion his camera was shot away from him, and he risked his life time and time again in order to get war pictures. In the year and one-half since Dawson went away his hair has become streaked with white. He was condemned to be shot on three occasions, and arrested seventy times. The Serbians were his most relentless enemies, and while he was their prisoner they kept him on the anxious seat three or four days at a time, during which periods they regaled him with stories concerning plans that were being made to shoot him. Dawson's experiences ought to prove to other adventurous youths that war-stricken Europe is a good place to stay away from at the present time.

New Yorkers delight at times to get back to the charms furnished by Mother Nature, and since it is so difficult to go to the country, its people are continually devising means whereby they can bring the country to the city. During the meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs a pine forest—at least there were three hundred trees—was utilized in decorating the Seventh Regiment Armory. Twenty thousand of the most representative women in the country attended the convention, and Father Knickbocker extended his glad right hand to them in hearty welcome. Of course the Boy Scouts were out in force, as they are upon every occasion, helping to make things agreeable for the ladies—whom the boys no doubt regarded as almost as important as themselves. As a matter of fact the Boy Scouts of New York have developed into such great prominence that the question of the wisdom of the movement is being seriously debated.

Mrs. Vernon Castle has returned from Europe, where she went to see her husband, who has enlisted in the British army, and is a member of the aviation corps. Mrs. Castle is quite delighted with her Vernon, and she says: "At last he has his wings. He looks lovely in his uniform. Within a week from now he expects to be sent to the front in the scouting division." Of course she expresses no fear that her distinguished spouse might be shot full of holes, thereby ceasing to be useful at cabaret performances in the future. Mrs. Vernon Castle was summoned before the King and Queen of England, and showed the royal personages her beautiful Broadway glides, by means of which she and her husband succeeded in piling up a fortune. The dancing queen has a peculiar fascination for a pet monkey, which she carries with her; but of course this eccentricity adds to the amount of space that she has been getting in the Metropolitan newspapers. She announces her intention of dancing exclusively for the movies in the future—and this will give the public a chance to see her for a nickle, or a dime, which most people are willing to admit will be a big improvement over the old-style method, by which it was necessary to pay one's way

THE WILL AND THE WAY
Phil. 4:1-13.

The road to Heaven is the way to success. None can truthfully say he has been a success unless he has made the best use of all elements of life, body, mind and spirit. The most successful are those, who by obeying the Divine will, are of the most use on earth to their fellowmen.

The way to success, as Shakespeare says, is a hard way to travel. Its paving is hard on the feet. Every moment is one of effort; many of pain. Sacrifices and concentration are necessary. But while the road many times seems impassable, still, there is always an opening and opportunity to pass on.

The road to success is a long road, and the journey should be begun early in life. If the youth is washed in ignorance, habits are formed which will hinder, if not absolutely prevent success. Dr. Osler once stirred the nation by saying that a man at 60 had passed the point of successful effort. He was correct. The man who has not reached success before that age, never will. When he reaches it, he may still have many years of usefulness to enjoy after having passed that age. A man cannot be successful if he starts after 40, yet it is seldom reached before that. But the one who would be a success at 40 or 60, must be learning the lessons, forming the habits, and accumulating knowledge in youth.

It is generally said, that there are not enough trained people with the ability to fill high salaried positions that are vacant and crying for men. This is true. The reason is that in obtaining the preparation necessary to fill these positions, sufficient will power is needed and developed that when the individual reaches perfection, he prefers to work for himself and get the whole loaf of bread, in place o fthe partial loaf some kind hearted corporation is willing to give.

Our companions on the road to success are varied, interesting, weak and strong, kind and unkind, foolish and judicious, extravagant, wasteful, economical, stingy. Study them well, for many lessons will be learned. You will see the wasteful impoverish themselves and be compelled to turn back; the sagacious husband their strength without being pernicious. Some will expend where it does not seem wise, and save where others spend. Watch the methods of others and let their progress recommend their management.

Make friends of your companions. There may come an incline when a stronger brother may assist you without loss, and it may be the difference between success and failure. Assist those who are weaker that you may likewise be helped, for friends soon leave those who take all and give nothing.

The road to success is not without its guideposts, or its advisers. The road is plain, but there are always many adventurers who are searching for a short cut, and easier traveling. Short cuts and easier roads exist, but they do not lead back to the main road. The only way to success is the well known road, and it must be traveled even if the way is hard.

The way of success is like the Arctic day, beneath the midnight sun. We begin our journey in the daylight, opportunity opens before us, and with a full heart we journey along, singing with the birds and carrying our burdens with comparative ease. The night finally comes—a long protracted night—a night that brings no rest from the struggle, no ease from our worries, and no light for our feet. We push on, feeling that each step must be the last, until finally it becomes so dark, we decide we must stop, cease the struggles, and proclaim ourselves to our companions, as failures. But the will and the habits, which have been developed along the journey, die hard, and we put in one step more, and then another, and so we struggle on, till a faint light appears in the east, and then the sun comes out, warms and encourages us, and we find we have won. Failures often come just before the dawning of success.

An individual never travels the path of success alone. At his side are the family and friends; they may help or hinder. If there is harmony and peace, if there is encouragement and mutual effort, success is assured. If there is discord and cross-purposes failure is inevitable.

"The reward of success always beckons onward, and the consciousness that we have reached the goal is man's greatest satisfaction. For the ambition to conquer is deep-seated, and one of God's greatest gifts to man.

A WOMAN IN LINE WORTH 10 PETITIONS IN WASTE BASKET

Slogan of Suffragists for Demonstration at St. Louis This Week.

St. Louis, June 10.—For their demonstration during the Democratic National Convention here, suffragists have adopted as their slogan: "A woman in line is worth ten petitions in the waste basket."

The first day of the convention Wednesday, June 14, will be Suffragists' Day.

A "golden lane," 12 blocks in length will be formed at 10 A. M. Lines of women wearing yellow and white sashes will be seated on camp stools along both edges of the sidewalks. Behind them will be a line of women standing. The women seated will carry closed yellow suffrage parasols across their laps, and those standing will carry theirs open, to protect themselves and their seated companions from the sun. The women will change places every 15 minutes.

When the noon whistles begin to blow, the lines will break. Immediately after, members of the Baby Welfare Association, the Visiting Nurses' Association and other organizations interested in baby welfare, will be hostesses at luncheon.

From 3 to 5 during the same afternoon the Women's Council will give an entertainment.

At 6:30 P. M. the Town Club will give a dinner at which visiting suffragists will be speakers. At 8 P. M. the Business Women's Equal Suffrage League will take charge of a great demonstration on one of the principal St. Louis streets. Business and professional women and all those whose vocations prevent them from having a place in the golden lane will take part.

According to St. Louis leaders, the day as a whole will be a huge demonstration of the solidarity of women for women's interests.

THYMOL MADE FROM HORSE MINT.

War Cuts Off Valuable Medicine—Need Can be Supplied at Home.

That thymol, which is popularly known as hookworm medicine, and which forms the basis of many important pharmaceutical compounds, can be made from horse mint is the information given out in Bulletni 372 of the United States Department of Agriculture. Heretofore, this drug has been imported from Northern Europe, where it is manufactured from ajowam weed, grown in Northern India, but since the European war has so greatly reduced its importation, there is need that this demand be supplied at home. This can be done, according to the Agricultural Department, from a weed known as horse mint. For several years this department has experiemented with horse mint, and it finds that under favorable conditions thymol can be produced from it for commercial purposes.

Horse mint is found wild on light, sandy soils from Southern New York to Florida, and it is found growing wild. It is quite frequent in North Carolina. By distilling the improved plants an average of 20 pounds of oil an acre may be obtained from first year plantings and 30 pounds from the yield of succeeding years. The average price for thymol has been for a number of years about $2 a pound.

MOSTLY CONTEMPLATIVE

By T. W. Chambliss.

What a world of heart-ache comes from a mal-adjustment of personal relations, sometimes chronic misunderstandings. Other times it is because of the apparent impossibility of good understanding. Sometimes it is between those who by reason of their constant intimacy should have been able to read each the thoughts of the other. Sometimes there are brothers and sisters, who have been clasped in the same arms and tossed by the same strong arms and have slept together in the same trumble bed but who, as time passes and they grow, find the peculiar antipathy or antagonism aroused when merely exchanging words. There is lack of sweet agreement. Just a petty disagreement—a jar—jangle.

Many are heavy-hearted because of being over-weighted with sensitiveness. Every look, every tone, every breath of criticism or disapproval brings a sting. Those people crave sympathy and appreciation and wither in neglect and loneliness. The world moves on, hardly pauses and the supersensitive folk are apparently left behind, overlooked, unconsidered, forgotten, just as if they were counted for nobodies—the truth of the matter is that the world, busy and rushing does not count them at all. How many people carry the marks of some inward bruise, inflicted unawares.

"These heavy feet still in the mire
Go tramping blossoms without end;
These hard, well-meaning hands we thrust
Amid the heart strings of a friend."

Others are wretched because of unsatisfied desires. Their hearts are filled with longings. Like caged birds, they beat their wings against the bars of hard unyielding circumstance. Perhaps it is because they do not know just how to place themselves in this busy world. Miss-fits likely and without the knowledge of the condition and nobody is big enough and thoughtful enough to tell them frankly and telling, suggest a way out of the maze. How many seem to themselves to be victims of a pitiless, blind fate, which consigns them to failure and defeat or shuts them up in conditions, which, like a prison yard, where they are held and shackled. One sharp pain or an acute illness is soon over and done with and sometimes one is in better health than before—but the weariness of a chronic condition. One can bear suffering when there is suggestion of relief—just ahead—but chronic miseries grow bitterly stale and rouse no fortitude.

Some—and who can tell the number—seem to have been born under a shadow—born with little capacity for either hope or joy. The sin of being responsible for such a handicap is just beginning to be realized. What is more pathetic and more pitiful than the look of age upon the face of a child—a child that seems to never smile? Children that are growing to manhood and womanhood and seem to have never discovered that the sunshine of God's smile and that life is His good gift. These are victims of hereditary wrong, sometimes and some other times they are victims of conditions for which they are not responsible. In either case they have been born under a shadow.

Bodily pain is caused by pressure upon nerve of sensation. Withdraw the pressure and the pain ceases. An excess of blood rushes to the spot which has been cut or bruised; the blood presses hard upon the nerves and perhaps produces heat or inflamation. Relief comes from drawing away the blood. Just so when the forces of thought and feeling are centred upon some sad fact—no matter what—the mind suffers pain and grief from abnormal pressure. Relief comes in turning the mental forces in another direction—forward, outward, upward—away from the hurting thing. Room must be made for other thoughts, objects, interests. The plunge into empty frivolity and dissipation—as many think to do—or to seek to drown one's woes in coase stimulants—is to trust to a remedy worse that the disease.

Good, honest labor has tremendous curative effect. The all wise use of the faculties given for active service. Indeed, very often, disquiet is caused by the uneasy stirring within us of powers not sufficiently exercised. Idle men and women, with genius of talent of any kind are often victims of acute depression.

"If I am long
Without the exercise of poesie,
My spirit ails, my body's somewhat wrong,
My heart beats 'Woe is me.'"

But the useful arts have the same curative value. Any worthy vocation, any occupation of mind, or hand about our powers, our opportunities, and our soothes grief, heals hurts and drives away the 'blue devils.' There is no peace for the creature that indulges in good-for-nothingness. "In idleness alone is perpetual dispair." Awaken the higher powers, they chafe against your own sluggishness and will not let you rest. Before the sunlight of honest occupation the shadows fly.

There is a deep social reason for much of this inward restlessness and urgency. All that is best in us struggles for expression because it does not belong to us alone. It belongs to others; the goods must be delivered. No gift, no talent, no faculty, is merely private property. The right use of our powers, our opostunities, and our time puts us in direct relation to our fellow-beings. Whether it be a days-work, a song, a sermon—we owe it to somebody. Even a silent meditation in solitude may fit you for some truer service.

"What shall I say? In my heart words are springing
Transcending all speech, and as deep as the sea;
All that is best in me breathes in my singing,
Binding forever your spirits to me."

When we allow our best life to unfold and express itself in word and deed, or to go out from us as pure influence, we grow like God, whose utterance creation is. Always we find it more blessed to give than to receive. We are ourselves served by others. Our private sorrows look smaller when we accustom ourselves to care for the larger life of the world, for the good of the community, for the public welfare, for the spread of truth and righteousness among mankind.

The cure for heart-ache is to be found in occupations which take us away from the petty self-regardings, the self-pityings, the morbid broodings, and which connect our lives with other lives and other affairs and merge our interests in the larger whole. The man who keeps public spirit alive in his own bosom or who really cares for those who are near to him, has such large and varied interests that he has neither time nor inclination to cuddle his own griefs.

through the expensive process of meals and drinks at gilded hotels and restaurants in order to see the famous Castles.

As a result of the sensational developments, resulting in the indictment of two public officials, charged with wire taping, it is learned that the practice has been in operation in New York for many years. It is also probable that the system of espionage of conversation, carried on under the direction of the New York police, is in common practice in many cities throughout the United States. While telephone subscribers have felt more or less secure in the use of this means of transmitting communications, yet it seems that a good deal of the comfort they have assumed, does not square with the conditions. While it is admited that there may have been some justification in the practice among the New York police, in tapping subscribers' telephone wires, yet the disclosures have startled New York to such an extent that official wire-tapping has become decidedly unpopular.

Unshaken Testimony

Time is the test of truth. And Doan's Kidney Pills have stood the test in Wilmington. No Wilmington resident who suffers backache, or annoying urinary ills can remain unconvinced by this twice-told testimony.

L. H. Partin, grocer, Market and Ninth Sts., Wilmington, says: "My back was weak and lame and I had pains across my loins. The kidney secretions were highly colored, painful in passage and contained sediment. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Bellamy's Drug Store, cleared up the kidney secretions. I was also relieved of the aches and pains in my back and loins."

(Statement given on February 25, 1908.)

On April 5, 1915, Mr. Partin said: "As soon as I notice that my kidneys are not acting as they should, I take Doan's Kidney Pills for a few days and they never fail to do the work."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy — get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Partin has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Brown Says He's In Race To The Finish

COLUMBUS MAN SWAMPED WITH LETTERS AND TELEGRAMS. NEVER SAW MORE INTEREST IN A CAMPAIGN.

Chadbourn, N. C., June 9.—"I think I can say with perfect safety that I have never seen more interest manifested than in the present campaign," said Hon. J. A. Brown at the close of his first week's campaign after the primary of last Saturday, here today.

"I have filed my notice with the Board of Elections for a second primary and I will be glad if you will so state in The Star tomorrow, as I do this because I have so many letters urging me not to think of withdrawing from the race. I am in it to the finish and will conduct my campaign upon a high and honorable plane. I am swamped with letters and telegrams. I thank my friends each and everyone."

BANK SAND BUSINESS AND THE ROCKS AHEAD

to read the statements made by a man who claims to have erected five dye plants in various sections of the country, all of which he claims are operating successfully. The statement is to the effect that the manufacturers o dyestuffs in this country have made enormous advances since the outbreak of the war, and it is claimed to be an indisputable fact that many of the American products are distinctly superior to the German output. It has been said frequently that it would be impossible to build the machinery required in the manufacture of dyestuffs but Americans who are already in th business say this is an error, and they claim that there is nothing required ir this manufacture that cannot be made here even better than abroad. An American manufacturer says: "In some of the recently constructed dye plants the equipment astonished Swiss and German chemists who understand the various processes for making dyes and they said that the American appliance: were far superior to anything they had seen in Germany. These experts found that our labor saving devices were the best they had ever seen and that in a general way there was nothing to prevent the United States from leading the world in the excellence and outpu of dyestuffs within the next two or three years."

Surprises never cease, and one could hardly believe it, except for the fact that the statistics are vouched for by the National Highways Protective Societies. Their figures show that only 22 children were run down by murderous chauffeurs, or otherwise killed in New York streets during the month of May. Anyone who has ever crossed Fifth Avenue or Broadway will feel that their chances for life are better than they ever dreamed, when they read this item, and learn there was only 41 victims of street accidents last month. Of these automobiles run down 27, wagons 10 and street cars four. The automobile maintains its championship in the state at large, for outside the city the deaths during the month were 27 by automobiles, two by wagons and one by street car.

One of the New York newspapers has made an investigation of recent claims of bacteriologists, with the result that it has been found that the entire complaint against the soda fountain is based upon uncleanly methods on the part of some of the attendants Soda water is all right, if the public will insist upon clean glasses and spoons. Discoveries of unsanitary methods at fountains has elicited th statement from one investigator, that "the safest way to have ice cream i to boil oneself in oil, fry the utensils, and inject the delicacy into the left arm."

Murderers and others interested in the prompt disposition of dead bodies will not be able to get as quick action in crematories as formerly, owing to disclosures in the Waite case. It appears that the Board of Health and the City Detective Bureau of New York are co-operating very closely, and all deaths are being carefully investigated before permits are issued for cremation.

in his hand. The hearse follows, a cheap but pretentious affair, veneered in yellow, with glass sides to display the coffin within. As it passes, the Greeks on the sidewalks uncover and tap their breasts in a vague manner intended to form the sign of the cross, executed backward in comparison with the Roman Catholics, following the ancient rite of the Greek church.

A covey of newsboys who might have learned their business on Park Row race down the street crying the latest edition at the tops of their voices. One word stands out: "Venize—" The Piraeus newsboy swallows the end of the Cretan's name—after all, the merest suggestion suffices, so well known it is.

One of the newsboys stops to buy a glass of lemonade of an old Turk, who carries his shop around on his back. It is a huge copper turnip with a stem a yard long that curves over his right shoulder. On a hook at his waist is a smaller copper pot containing water with which the vender rinses the glasses hanging on hooks at his belt. To pour the lemonade, the old Turk merely bends over, holding the glass aloft in his right hand. The movement tilts the copper turnip and out runs the liquid.

As the cool of the evening comes, the sidewalk cafes are crowded. The streets swarm with beggars—little girls with faded flowers who push their way among the tables and seek to pin their posies on the coats of likely-looking gentlemen too, polite to push away the scrawney little hands. A man with a phonograph under his arm sets it up on a vacant table and takes a battered record from under his coat—"Waiting for the Robert E. Lee," or "Get Out and Get Under." When the concert is over, the mechanical musician exacts his toll from all and sundry within hearing distance. Prosperous mendicants, these. But in the shadows, shy and frightened, yet desperate with hunger, babes in arms, lurk the wives of Greece's mobilized but inactive army creeping out to accost the more fortunate with their almost unintelligible wingsong of misery.

The value of livestock dying from disease on the National Forest ranges in 1915 was less than $200,000. A majority of the cattlemen are now vaccinating their stock for blackleg, one of the chief loss-causing catle diseases of the West and thus preventing the serious losses of the past.

PLANS FOR ENTERTAINMENT OF DELEGATES AT ST. LOUIS

Committee Has Many Enjoyment Features Arranged for the Visitors.

St. Louis, Mo., June 10.—Detailed plans for the entertainment of delegates and visitors at the Democratic National Convention here next week have been formulated. Under auspices of the General Entertainment Committee, in connection with the Business Men's League, delegates and alternates will be taken on an automobile ride on the first day, June 14.

Another afternoon the visitors will attend the ball game. From the ball park they will be taken on a river excursion, either on the steamer Grey Eagle or St. Paul. A buffet dinner will be served on the boat.

The Kentucky Society will treat its guests to an automobile ride and a dinner at an inn about twelve miles from the city. Other state clubs have established headquarters, and applications for hotel room and so forth will be taken care of as well as possible. Most of the hotel space already has been taken, but the state organizations, especialy the college and university contingent, are booking rooms in all places possible, even in private homes.

College clubs have made arrangements for several receptions during the convention, and have provided several entertainments which will savor of under-graduate days.

The hospitality of St. Louis will be extended, not only to delegates, but to visitors from other states who come here during convention week.

The various civic organizations in the city have been canvassed and to each has been assigned the entertainment of delegates and visitors from a specific state. Members of the various organizations who have automobiles will take the delegates and visitors from the specified states on an automobile tour of the parks and residence streets of the city.

On the night of June 13—the night before the convention—the Metropolitan Opera Company, of New York, will give an outdoor production of Wagner's Siegfried. This will be staged in Robinson Field, the baseball park of the St. Louis Nationals.

On the night of Monday, June 12, the Democratic National Committee and the visiting newspaper men will be entertained at a reception at an inn a few miles outside the city. Automobile transportation will be provided for the guests.

CAUSE OF TRUANCY

Determined by Physical Defects Among School Children.

It has been proven undeniably by the New York Child Hygiene Department that truancy of school children is caused mainly by physical defects, according to a statement issued recently by the State Board of Health. Recently the department of education of that city requested the Bureau of Child Hygiene to undertake a physical examination of truants summoned before the district superintendent for a hearing. Eighty-five such truants have thus far been examined and the following interesting results found:

Seventy-seven of the 85 truants examined were found to have defective eyesight; sixty-four were found to have some obstruction to nasal breathing; twenty-six had bone deformities; seventeen had heart trouble, while two were subject to convulsions and one had pulmonary tuberculosis.

Another interesting fact that developed through this examination was the part that environment plays in truancy. In nine instances the family life and history appeared to have a definite bearing; the father in five cases was alcoholic, in some insane, in one tuberculosis. Family quarrels, squalid homes, and gang life played their parts, also.

"The need of physical examinations for school children as a means of improving their health and aiding in their education becomes more and more apparent," says the State Board of Health. "Medical school inspection does not only prevent truancy, repeaters and what is known in some instances as backward children and in others as feelbe-mindedness, but it prevents lifelong illnesses and defects and along with these moral and physical wrecks."

AMERICANIZATION IN CALIFORNIA.

Below is a copy of a letter sent out by State Superintendent Edward Hyatt, to the school superintendents of California, under date of May 5, 1916. The California State Education Department is thus the second to attack the problem of the education of the foreign-born from the State point of view.

"Please let me call your particular attention to a phase of public education that has not engaged much of our attention heretofore, but that is surely going to demand it in the near future—that is, the education and the Americanization of the adult foreigner.

"Among thoughtful people and among law makers is growing up the conviction that the presence of the illiterate foreigner is a danger and a menace to us and to our institutions. Under present conditions he may be among us twenty years or more, knowing nothing of our language, open to none of the influences that tend to good citizenship. He can be guided and moved by the intriguer and the boss of his own nationality, but can not be touched by Uncle Sam. Thus, in time of stress or danger, he may become dangerous and threatening in the extreme to the very life of the republic.

"It is coming about that the burden of teaching and Americanizing the foreigner is to be laid upon the educational forces of the commonwealth. That means US.

"The Commission of Immigration and Housing has been created. This body can investigate and plan and recommend—but it is the school people who must Teach. There are 75,000 illiterates reported in California. There are over half a million foreign-born residents. These classes are becoming so large, as compared with our school population, that the State is taking cognizance of the matter and is moving toward assuming responsibility.

"At present, the most definite way to reach our adult foreigners is through the night schools. The machinery for organizing night schools is at hand in every school district. Any school may establish a night school by action of its own board of trustees. It must provide for housing and maintaining the night school itself, as it will get no additional public money until its additional attendance gives it additional apportionment during the following year. Free text books are furnished by the State, however.

"The object of this letter is two-fold: First, to call your atteniton to the shadow of coming events; and, second, to warn you that those schools must needs add to their September budgets, to their special taxes, the money necessary for opening the schools and maintaining them during the first year.

"If this office can give you any further information or assistance, please be free to call on us."

THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE

"A CALL TO ARMS AGAINST WAR"

ROYAL 3 DAYS JUNE 21, 22, 23

THEATRICAL

It's a great all-star bill again tomorrow at the Bijou. The other programmes are simply not in it when it comes to aggregating the big stars on a single day's programme.

Popular Mary Fuller—"Our Mary"—is a strong drawing card at any time, with her beauty, her winsome and bewitching personality and superb acting capabilities; but when the added attraction is a great film drama written by such a genius as Capt. Leslie T. Peacock, who wrote the story for "Neptune's Daughter," and other great film masterpieces, is the attraction, it gets doubly interesting. "The Limousine Mystery" is the title and it is in two rousing reels of thrills and punches.

COMMODORB J. STUART BLACKTON
Author of the Eight-Reel Spectacular "Battle Cry of Peace" Produced by the Vitagraph Company. His Purpose in Writing this Great Drama Was to Visualize to the American People the Defenseless Condition of the Country and the Need for Preparedness.

Starring with beautiful Mary Fuller is Joseph W. Girard, Anthony Merlo and William Welsh, making an all-star line-up.

Among the great things in "Animated Weekly" for tomorrow are: "Ending Mexican Conference," showing throngs waiting for General Obregon to finish final talk with Generals Scott and Funston, Mexico's War Minister, Army Auto using rails for road, midnight fire destroying country club, etc; "Greatest Civic Parade," in which 145,000 march in New York City, which took 14 hours to pass reviewing stand: "Navy on Parade," at Charleston Navy Yard. Among the great sport events are "Shriners greet Tris Speaker at Boston," "One Hundred Miles on Hour" in Sheepshead Speedway races; "Kentucky's Big Race," at annual running of Derby Blue Grass classic, etc.

"Her Celluloid Hero" is a great Nestor comedy scream with the usual line-up—Lyons, Moran, Compson.

"Secret of the Submarine."

Now comes the greatest theme of all motion pictures—the timely presentation of a remarkable proposed submarine invention—surrounded by a globe-girdling web of amazing plot and intrigue and a baffling "mystery within a mystery," which has been incorporated in the latest and greatest serial achievement of all filmdom, "The Secret of the S ubmarine," produced by the creators of those titanic serial successes, "The Girl and the Game" and "The Diamond from the Sky," and which is announced for presentation at the Grand theatre beginning next Wednesday, June 14th.

"The Secret of the Submarine" strikes the keynote of real Americanism—makes it heard around the world. The invention, barely achieved, is destroyed in a fierce undersea encounter. The United States and foreign governments—also a selfish millionaire—are in a hot contest for it. With the inventor's death, the sole records, hidden in an old library, pass from hand to hand. The mad chase carries to Paris, London, Petrograd and back to the United States. The inventor's daughter's "identity" is the "mystery within a mystery" that millions will strive to solve.

The well balanced company is ideal as it draws with vivid contrasts, keen delineations with different strong characters. Thomas Chatterton, the popular leading man, is a striking figure, an intrepid actor who scores continuously. Opposite him, captivating, beautiful Juanita Hansen is the heroine ideal—with the daring and dash that thrills. Other powerful roles are in the hands of Joseph Beaudley, Hugh Bennett, Lamar Johnston, Hylda Hollis and William Tedmarsh.

Clara Kimball Young—Royal.

Exceeding its superb dramatic power any release ever put out with this star, tomorrow's presentation at the Royal of Clara Kimball Young, playing the title role in Du Murier's world renowned novel and play, "Trilby," opposite that talent stage actor, Wilton Lackaye, in the role of Svengali, will be one of the biggest hits of the whole season at the Royal.

Any one at all familiar with "Trilby" might easily have foreseen that it would lend itself readily to screen adaptation, and in the hands of one of the greatest producers in America it has been even strengthened until it is the climax of dramatic thunderbolts. The almost entire absence of "cut-backs" in the telling of the story places it in the true drama class where the human will is shown in action and tells its own story—not by the use of the narrative form.

Clara Kimball Young makes an ideal Trilby. Her beauty of face, perfection of form and power as an actress fit the part splendidly, and some of the best things she ever registered on the screen is seen in this feature. She portrayed the attributes of the character with all the delicacy of appeal and emotional feeling called for by the requirements of the part. Ability, grace, beauty and finished acting—all these Miss Young has brought to the role.

Wilton Lackaye originated the role of Svengali on the stage and his impersonation of the part has long been recognized as a work of great merit.

Dustin Farnum at Grand.

Dustin Farnum, so well known on both the legitimate and shadow stage, and admired in active out-door parts, will appear at the Grand tomorrow in an entirely different role from anything played yet. This time it is as "David Garrick," in the film adaptation of this great play of the same name, released on the Paramount programme. In this serious dramatic role he shows the histrionic value of years of stage craft and portrays a Garrick such as was the idol of the British public who worthily rests in Westminster Abbey.

Beautiful enough to make any man fall in love with her is Winnifred Kingston's appearance as Ada Ingot in "David Garrick." A garden, fairylike in its perfect beauty, the stalwart lover and Winnifred Kingston in an old fashioned tea gown together, form one of the most romantically beautiful scenes ever shown in pictures.

The love story of this great man's life is played with feeling and power by Dustin Farnum, supported by a strong cast made up of Herbert Standing, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Olive White and Mary Mersch.

Playing the Title Role in "Trilby," Opposite Wilton Lackaye at the Royal Tomorrow.

WINIFRED KINGSTON
Starring With Dustin Farnum in "David Garrick," at the Grand Monday.

UNIVERSITY SUMMER SCHOOL FOR TEACHERS OPENS THIS WEEK

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Chapel Hill, N. C., June 10.—At the close of the week preceding the formal opening of the University of North Carolina Summer School, for Teachers, all preliminary arrangements have been made for the accommodation of the largest body of students ever registered for the summer courses of the University. The past week has been a trying one for the management of the summer school for the reason that a great many teachers have decided the last moment that they wish to attend the summer school and that they wish rooms reserved in dormitories that are already completely filled.

Every dormitory on the campus has been turned over for occupancy by the lady teachers, except the University Inn., which will be occupied by the men; and every available room has already been engaged. The fraternity halls which have been turned over to the summer school management still have a few desirable rooms that are not as yet taken. The homes and boarding houses of the town have been canvassed, and as many as can be secured are being reserved for students who decide this late to attend the summer school.

Although the formal opening will be Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, students are already arriving on the hill who wish to arrange before the opening for special courses. Tuesday and Wednesday, June 13-14, will be given up to registration, selection of courses, and preparation for work. The work of the classes will begin on Thursday, the 15th.

MALARIA IN NORTH CAROLINA

Has Fewer People Infected With Malaria Than Any Other Southern State.

That North Carolina has the lowest percentage of malaria infected people of any of the Southern States is according to a recent report on the endemic index of malaria in the South by Dr. R. H. von Ezdorf, of the United States Public Health Service. The twelve Southern States included in this malaria campaign conducted by Dr. von Ezdorf are Virginia, North Carolina ,South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mississipupi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Kentucky, Tennessee and the eastern part of Texas. It was found that out of a population of about 25,000,000 for these states, at least 4 per cent of the people suffer an attack of malarial fever each year, and that one death occurs out of from every 50 to 300 cases.

Mississippi, according to this investigation, showed the highest percentage of infected people, which was 31.2 per cent. North Carolina's rate was 7.8 per cent while Virginia's was 9.3 and South Carolina's was 11.9 Plateau, Alabama, showed the lowest rate of infection of any individual place, which was 1.7, and the Yazoo Valley, Mississippi, showed the highest, which was 40.9.

Another interesting fact that developed through this study of malarial conditions in the South was that one out of every 7.6 persons examined was found to be a malaria carrier, and that one out of every four infected persons was a potential carrier, that is, he harbored the sexual forms necessary for infecting a malaria-bearing mosquito. It was also found that the percentage of infection among the whites was only 8.8 per cent as compared with 20.6 per cent for colored.

FOR WALDEN CREEK DRAW

Contract Awarded by Brunswick Commissioners to G. F. Drew—Tax Rate Lower.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Southport, N. C., June 10.—At the county commissioners' meeting held this week, the plan for the draw in the new bridge at Walden creek was accepted by the United States Government, and the board made the contract for the work to G. F. Drew. This work has been held up two months, awaiting the decision on the draw.

This bridge is four miles from Southport, and one mile from where the creek empties into the Cape Fear river. Walden creek is on the new highway, the Murchison, between this city and Wilmington.

It was at first thought when this highway was undertaken and the estimates made that no draw would be needed at Walden creek, but the cut of timber above this point has greatly increased with the building of saw mills, which demanded a water outlet through this creek, necessitating the draw.

An important matter to the tax-payers of Brunswick county is the action of the commissioners in its tax levy for the ensuing year, the poll being placed at $2, with a reduction in the tax rate.

The commissioners made these reductions for two reasons: That the valuations had been high last year, and that the board believed that with its proposed economic management the saving could be made.

Sheriff Robinson, who had been given to June 1 for settlement, asked for an extension until June 15, when a final settlement is asked.

URGES GREAT NATIONAL ROAD CONGRESS HELD ONCE A YEAR.

Washington, June 10.—"Unquestionably the time has arrived for a great National Road Congress to be held once a year in the National Capital under Federal government direction," asserts George C. Diehl, chairman of the A. A. A. Good Roads Board.

"This gathering in Washington would be under the auspices of the United States Office of Public Roads and Rural Engineering of the Department of Agriculture," continues Mr. Diehl, "and the event could be made most comprehensive in its scope; there could be a complete exhibit of road machinery and road materials; there could be sample construction of various kinds of highways; road schools could be conducted for state, county and town engineers; and various technical phases of the work could be set forth by trained experts who would gladly attend such a great good roads event.

"Then there would come the interrelated phases of road travel and road transportation. Undoubtedly the Department of the Interior, because of its National parks, would set forth the scenic attractions which are under government supervision. Various states would be given opportunity of advertising their attractions. All around, an assemblage could be brought about which would prove exceedingly effective.

"The Good Roads Board believes in state highway conventions which are generally called for a specific purpose in the endeavor to concentrate the efforts of road enthusiasts for definite ends. These state meetings are of incalculable value, for the state is the political sub-division which must carry on by far the greatest burden of future road construction and maintenance.

"With the vast amount of funds being expended throughout the country, the government of the highway departments is becoming largely a question of scientific management, and it is believed that if the county were the smallest unit of administration that greater efficiency would result. The numerous state good roads meetings converged into a great national congress once a year, held in the National Capital, it is believed, would be the best way of handling the changed highway situation, and the government could properly assume the obligation resulting from the management of this great national event.

"The time has arrived when highway conventions should have more of an official character. There should be a good roads meeting in every township in the United States at least once a year, held under the charge of the chief highway official of the township. There should be at least one county meeting held every year in each county, under the charge of the county engineer or the chief highway official. There should be one state meeting in each state each year, under the charge of the State highway commission. Then the local automobile clubs, the good roads associations and others could co-operate in these conventions as their interest and location warranted. The township, county and state meetings should be held before the national meeting, so that at each of the smaller gatherings delegates could be named to go to the national convention, which in reality would be a great good roads school, lasting for one or two weeks, in the city of Washington, under the charge of the most important highway officials of the country, namely, the Federal authority in charge of governmental expenditure."

EVENTS OF A WEEK IN AND ABOUT LUMBERTON

Grass Growing and Labor Scarce in Robeson County.

Mrs. W. H. Prevatt Dead—Low Rates to Beach and Elsewhere—Revival Meeting Largely Attended. Brown Gaining Strength

(Special Star Correspondence).

Lumberton, N. C., June 10.—During the past several days good rains have fallen throughout this section, and with the rains came showers of grass, or that is the way the fields look in many places. Grass was never seen to grow thicker and faster in some sections, and with scarcity of labor if some of the crops are not ruined by grass it will be remarkable. There is absolutely no excuse for loafing in this section. All that crops need now is work.

The fishing business is dead here for the present, as Lumber river is on a big swell. The river banks will be given a rest for a few days, and those who have been "waiting for a bite" can now join the political gossipers and baseball fans. But it makes little difference about fish, as the prices are prohibitive to people who have not plenty of money.

Mrs. W. H. Prevatt died at the home of her sister, Mrs. A. E. Spivey, near the Union station, Wednesday midnight. Mrs. Prevatt was 38 years old, and for the past few years had not enjoyed good health. Her fatal illness extended over a period of one month. Mrs. Prevatt is survived by her husband and four children. The funeral was conducted at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon and the remains laid to rest in the Lewis cemetery near the family home on the Fairmont road, six miles from Lumberton.

A crate containing two watermelons, gross weight 90 pounds, attracted much attention at the express office yesterday morning. There is no doubt of the fact that they were the first ripe watermelons seen here this season.

Announcements have been received here of the marriage at Kinston, N. C., June 7th, of Mr. Theodore Edgar Stainback to Miss Nan Elizabeth Randolph. Mr. Stainback is a brother of Mrs. Claire Thomas, of Lumberton. He is a popular pharmacist of Kinston. Many friends here will extend best wishes.

Low Rates to Beach

If there are any corporations in the world that get more unreasonable abuse than the railroads, we have not heard of it or them, but the railroads are not all bad, or rather the men who manage them. They must be given credit for having sympathetic hearts at times, at least. Just at the present time, for instance, there are many sick politicians throughout this section who really need to get off somewhere and meditate on how it all happened. The railroads are right to the rescue. The rates are offered to all, including defeated candidates, as well as everybody else. Wilmington is inviting all good roads advocates and everybody else to go to that city June 19-20-21 and until noon of the 22nd. The Seaboard offers a rate of $2.40 for the round trip, good returning until the 26th. A mighty good time to visit the beaches at small cost.

On the 20th, Walton Bethune will console everyone who will go with him on his Washington excursion. He will leave here Tuesday morning, June 20, over V. & C. S., and return Saturday. Fare for the round trip, including Pullman, hotels, side trips, etc., $32.90. Those who have never been to Washington should take this trip. Also on Tuesday, June 20th, tickets will be sold here to Charleston, S. C., and return for $3.00, good on any passenger train over the R. & C. and Seaboard. This will be the first trip of the kind ever offered to the people of this section and is "dirt cheap." These rates are good going on Tuesday and returning on Thursday. All these trips are good.

To Celebrate Fourth.

Fayetteville is advertising a big 4th of July celebration. Among other attractions advertised is a $300 fireworks display and two brass bands. Lumberton ought to have something on that day. Might have automobile races, but that would be nothing new. Three hundred dollars fireworks display would be bigger.

The protracted meeting which began at the First Baptist church last Sunday is being attended by large congregations and much interest is being shown. Rev. Dr. Vines, of Charlotte, is assisting the pastor, Rev. C. L. Greaves, and is a minister of much power.

The property tax rate for Lumberton has been reduced 13 cents on the $100 worth of property, and 39 cents on the poll, but license taxes have been more than doubled in some instances. Some people are delighted and some are sore.

In the primary last Saturday there was much hard work done in Lumberton for the respective candidates, especially so for the congressional candidates. Preparations were made for a much larger vote and quite a number were disappointed at the way the voters didn't turn out. There was very little drinking, only a few drunks being observed. That money was not offered, whether accepted or not, there is little doubt. One man stated yesterday that he had not been paid, but unless he was in short time he was going to turn the tables. One thing sure, the lions and the lambs have lain together.

Primaries and Politics.

There are those who of course differ with the writer in some of his political views, but all who are willing to admit facts must admit that the congressional situation in this section is Brown and getting more so every day, and unless there is a big change it is going to be very Brown on Saturday, July 1st. All will not deny the fact that many votes were made for Brown here last Saturday by some of the opposition supporters overdoing the thing in trying to have the people vote just as they wanted them to vote. Such work as is charged on the part of a few is disgusting and disgraceful. One young fellow was chased around the court house by different politicians trying to show hi mhow to vote. When that could not be done, he was told that his name was not on the registration book and that he could not vote. A gentleman who had witnessed the great interest taken in the young fellow's vote, came to his rescue and went with him to see, and found that his name was there alright. He was then told to mark his ticket as he desired to vote, and vote to suit himself. Another fellow, it is said, who could not read, let one man fix his ticket for him, saying he only wanted to vote for a man (whose name did not appear on the ticket). He was told alright, and the ticket was marked to suit the man marking, not the man voting. If that is clean politics, we have to admit that we are "narrow" as we have been charged since the month of June came in. Some grave charges have been made, which we heard it stated last night would be heard from in Washington if sworn affidavits would do any good. We saw a communication from another section of the county last night which is calculated to cause trouble. A reliable man said he had figures that would open eyes. Let any one deny the fact that Republican votes have been made for the November election by a few politicians over-doing the thing.

We stated in these columns a few weeks ago that the people of Robeson county were not going to give up Sheriff Lewis yet awhile. That assertion has been verified by the fact that while he received over 2,200 votes in the inside the limit in one respect at least—only one quart.

Some busy reporter has reported The Star man for saying too much about liquor—said we showed up the agent in a bad light. The agent couldn't see it that way and the natural conclusion is that the reporter had been drinking cross-eyed liquor. The express agent in Lumberton, one of the best in the service of the company, is one of our best friends.

Some Ham This.

A Robeson county raised ham has attracted much attention at the grocery store of Mr. J. H. Wishart, this week. It was just like any other ham except that it weighed 55 or 56 pounds. We heard some one ask the price and the reply was "$14.50—24 cents a pound." Enough meat could easily be made in Robeson to supply the population. The range is here alright, but it takes work—haven't enough hog raisers in the business.

Mr. Rhyne, who resigned his position at the Seaboard station a year or two ago to go with the Lumberton Cotton Mills, is soon to leave that business to go with the V. & C. S. railroad. No more capable or clever railroad man here than Mr. Rhyne.

A district meeting of the U. D. C. was held in the opera house here yesterday. Morning and afternoon sessions were held.

Blockade Still Captured.

Sheriff Lewis, accompanied by Deputy Arch Prevatt and Rural Policeman Townsend, of St. Pauls, captured a 35-gallon blockade still in St. Pauls township Thursday night. The officers were given a tip which led them to the spot. No one was at home, and only one quart of whiskey was found. The proprietor of the establishment was side the limit in one respect at least—only one quart.

Mr. Robert Dees was stricken early Tuesday morning with a third stroke of paralysis, and since that time his life has been hanging by a thread. His condition was reported as more favorable this morning. Mr. Dees is away up in the eighties and his vitality is something wonderful. W. S. W.

place of other things which are of a more positive and constructive value.

"Lieut. Gen. Sir Robert Baden-Powell (who developed the 'be prepared' plan) with long experience in England's recruiting work, strongly opposed military drill for the younger boys, and is fighting hard now against the cadet system which is advocated by some in Great Britain. He opposes it on the ground that it defeats the object it is intended to accomplish; that efficient, well-disciplined, fighting men cannot be made without a personal development of character, responsibility, self-discipline, physical health, none of which come from the sort of military 'drill' that young boys receive.

"The Boy Scouts of America goes in a different way about the business of training boys for the service of their country. All of the interests and activities of the scouts are planned so as to give the boy a grounding in the qualities that make for good citizenship, a strong body, an alert mind, moral perceptions and inclinations, a knowledge of his country and of the true meaning of the flag. The boy who gets these in his teens and who in addition gets the training given the scouts will be able to master purely military drill in one-tenth the time the average boy would require; and he would have, plus this, initiative, resource, adaptability and ability to care for himself which the cadet would not have had time to require. • • •

"The summer camps will be a demonstration. But back of this demonstration is that something else about the boy scouts training which so changes and improves the spirit of the boy and his attitude toward his home, his school, his work and his country and his flag. It is what will count for most in an hour of crisis."

National headquarters records on June 1 showed that 42,000 men enrolled as scoutmasters and in other posts of leadership are prepared to assist in the summer encampments for which 180,495 boys are eligible. In addition, the camps will have the services of Army and Navy officers, naturalists, scoutcraft experts, government life saving service officers, physicians, geologists, civil engineers, and other men qualified to give instruction.

"In this day when so much is being said about patriotic service," the statement says, "recognition should be given to the personal sacrifice of the thousands of men who without compensation are devoting many hours every week to the training of scouts and who give up their own vacation plans in order to see that their scouts are properly protected and instructed in the scout camps this summer.

"These men stand in very close relationship to the boys; they have won their respect, admiration and confidence; they have come into positions of unusual influence in these young lives. Clean, strong men of unquestioned patriotism, they are playing a very large part in the work of preparing this nation for any emergency."

There are troops of Boy Scouts in virtually every city and town in the United States and nearly all will have their season in camp. Each troop, the statement says, will be in charge of men vouched for and constantly under the scrutiny of leading men associated with each community's schools, churches and other institutions, and proper sanitation, food, sleeping quarters and discipline will be provided at the camps for the physical and mental equipment of the boys.

TREES PLANTED BY MACHINE

A machine which plants from 10 to 15 thousand forest tree seedlings a day is now being used at the Letchworth Park Forest and Arboretum, in Myoming County, N. Y., according to officials of the Forest Service who are acting as advisers in the work. Previously the planting has been done by hand at the rate of 1,200 to 1,500 trees each day per man.

The machine was designed to set out cabbage and tomato plants, but works equally well with trees. It is about the size of an ordinary mowing machine and is operated by three men and two horses. One man drives the team while the other two handle the seedlings. The machine makes a furrow in which the trees are set at any desired distance, and an automatic device indicates where they should be dropped. Two metal-tired wheels push and roll the dirt firmly down around the roots. This is a very desirable feature, it is said, because the trees are apt to die if this is not well done. Two attachments make it possible to place water and fertilizer at the roots of each seedling. Another attachment marks the line on which the next row of trees is to be planted.

No cost figures are available yet, but officials say that the cost will be much less than when the planting is done by hand. It is stated that the machine can be used on any land which has been cleared and is not too rough to plow and harrow.

COTTON ADVANCES SLIGHTLY

Prices in the Morning Rose to $2 Per Bale Over Low Level of a Week Ago—Some Reaction.

New York, June 10.—There was quite a sharp advance in the cotton market here this morning with December contracts selling up to 13.17, or a point above the best prices touched on the bulke of Wednesday and practically $2 per bale above the low level of last week. Slight reactions occurred later, but closing prices were within 3 or 4 points of the best, with the tone steady at net gain of from 5 to 8 points for the day.

Private cables reported a quiet market in Liverpool with a little straddle and hedge selling, and also said that there had been some selling on the breaking of the monsoon in India. Cotton closed steady.

STOCKS SOMEWHAT INACTIVE

Wall Street's Attention Again Turned to Events at Chicago—Rails Are Slightly Heavy.

New York, June 10.—The two-hour session of the stock market today was superficial and perfunctory at best, all eyes being again directed toward Chicago. Trading was exceedingly light and narrow, with a mixture of advances and declines, specialties helping largely to hold up the recent level of averages. Rails were an unimportant factor with slight heaviness in Reading, Chesapeake & Ohio, Southern Pacific and Southern Railway preferred, which was neutralized by further advances in Colorado Southern and St. Louis Southwestern, preferred, issues.

The usual leaders displayed little animation and no marked trend. United States Steel equalled its recent high quotation at the outset, but yielded on the May tonnage statement with a grand total for a new record of 9,937,798 tons. Total sales of stocks amounted to 193,000 shares.

The statement of the local clearing house banks was the most interesting exhibit submitted for a long time with an actual loan contraction of $61,597,000, and a decrease of over $73,000,000 in demand deposit, while reserves showed their first gain in seven weeks, increasing $16,422,960, and bringing the excess item up to $72,273,300.

Dealings in bonds today were nominal and confined to better known issues. Total sales, par value, were $1,100,000. United States coupon 4s advanced 1-2, registered 4s, 3-4, and Panama 3s, 1 1-4 per cent on call during the week.

MRS. STONER GIVES HER RELIGIOUS VIEWS

In Lecture at Hotel Majestic in New York Last Week

Believes There is Good in All Religions and That Love is Most Important —Service Should be Guiding Principle.

New York, June 10.—Mrs. Winifred Stoner, who is in New York city founding natural education schools and holding conferences with educators held a most interesting conference, according to press reports, at the Hotel Majestic this week.

In reply to the question "What are your religious views?" Mrs. Stoner replied:

"Those of you who have followed me in my New York lectures will notice that I omit two subjects, the subjects of religion and politics. Each of us has an opinion on these subjects which may prove antagonistic to others. I am working to bring love and happiness into this world—not hate. For that reason I strive to talk of the development of children solely from the moral standpoint and not in connection with any special creed.

"However, because of my silence concerning religious ideas I have been grossly misrepresented and now that you ask me point blank, what is my belief? I shall tell you.

"My religion is that of love and service. It is a fool who says that there is no God and no future. An intuitive principle within us makes us feel that there is a Higher Power and a new life. Nature proves that no matter can be destroyed. If it were not for the hope of immortality there would be little use to continue our struggle in this world where life is a two fold blossom of sorrow and happiness but the blossom of sorrow over waves to the stronger.

"I am not antagonistic to any church. If people find comfort in believing a certain creed and in worshipping after a certain form why should they not take this comfort. But I do not believe in accepting everything which any minister preaches as the truth. What is truth? The truth is that we know nothing. We are all groping in the darkness seeking the light and we worship according to our enlightenment.

"The Greek were a voluptuous people and had voluptuous gods. The Romans were warlike and their gods were of the same character. The Hebrews were a stern abstemious race and their God as they saw him and as they described him in the books of the Old Testament, was a stern God who should be feared more than loved. A God who said: "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth." A God who commanded his socalled chosen people to kill the married women and all men of Gentile tribes and to save the virgins for themselves.

"I love the Jewish people as a race and know that despite the fact that they are supposed to follow the teachings of the old testament that they are too big and too generous to obey such doctrines. In the time of trouble no one has ever been kinder to me than my Jewish friends. Why then should they continue to call the Old Testament the exact Word of God? We were given our minds to reason. We were not expected to accept everything as our forfathers gave it to us.

"And now I come to the New Testament and to Christianity. I have been reviled because I have said that there is good in all religions. There is good also in every human being. At one time when I said a word for Bob Ingersol because he took people out of the narrow ruts in which they had long traveled and made them think for themselves, a so-called Christian lady fainted. She has called me an infidel because I have quoted Tom Payne's glorious saying "Not my country but my kind."

"Jesus Christ's last commandment is my sole commandment "A New commandment I give unto you that you love one another as I have loved you." If we love our fellow men we will see good in them instead of evil; we cannot rob, we cannot murder, we can do no real harm. And this applies to believers in other so-called religions.

"There is good in Buddhism, in Confucianism even in Mohammedanism. For twenty centuries not a drop of blood has been shed in the name of Buddha. Can Christians say as much? Confucius gave his disciples the same golden rule which Christ taught to his followers. Mohammedan taught his people to understand the real meaning of the word hospitality?" How many Christian understand this word?

"The God I worship is not a God of fear. He loves little children and he would not permit such a devil as was recently described in an evangelistic meeting which I attended, to inspire fear in their hearts. I am not here to knock but I must be candid in saying that I do not believe in allowing children to attend so-called revivalistic meetings. I have followed many evangelists and seen the result of their preaching. They made converts through painting scenes of punishment for those who will not tread the sawdust path and they arouse so-called religious exaltation which never lasts. Not long ago (with righteous indignation) I watched boys being led down the saw dust trail by those who exerted great influence. I asked one of these boys why he went forward. The boy answered me truly: "Well the other boys were going and I thought I had better follow. He confessed to me that he didn't pay any attention to the words of the preacher. He went forward like a sheep following others.

"There is only one way to save our boys and girls and to make them healthy, happy efficient citizens. That is through the government paying preachers, who can then preach the truth as they see it and not fear to offend the members of their congregations. These preachers should be teachers in every sense of the word—not mere pulpit puppets, who stand up and read what 'the Scriptures say.' I have no patience with anyone who cannot deliver his message from his soul. It is not a live message if he must read it.

"Our churches should not the damp musty unhealthy buildings they now are. Let us learn from the Mohammedans and throw upon our churches for schools, where children can learn morality. And above all let us have Sunday schools which will be a delight to children. Let us teach the little ones through moving pictures and inspiring hymns. And let us learn from some of the Western ministers who throw open their church halls for places of meeting each night in the week. There the stranger may come and receive a warm handshake and some kind words. There the young people go to dances rather than to dens of iniquity. There the church members strive to help young girls secure employment through having real employment agencies. Such churches carry out Christ's idea of real religion or service.

"In my opinion there is too much praying and not enough service. What would a parent think of a child who spent all of his time praying: 'Dear Father please make me good and dear father please give me good things to eat and dear father please let me whip every boy with whom I fight.' This is exactly the way some people pray and do nothing.

"It is not through holding revivals but rather in learning how to control ourselves and to live as shining examples of Christ's teachings that we are to encourage our children to lead good lives and to prepare themselves for the life to come.

"And this leads me to the subject of Foreign Missions. Do I believe in foreign missions? It is my belief that our first duty should be at home. I know a woman who does great good to help poor children in many cities and yet has neglected her own children so that her eldest daughter died because of this neglect and her two youngest children are called 'Terrors.' We cannot deny that this woman has done great good for humanity but she has failed in her highest mission of motherhood and home maker.

"This example may be applied to home and foreign missions. Let us first help the poor in our own cities and country before we begin our foreign missionary work.

"The fault with most of us is that we lack the courage to express our honest opinions. Many people have come to me and acknowledged that they had similar religious views to my own they were afraid to let the world know of their views. Others are too lazy or too contented to think for themselves. They are content with their environment and with the views of their ancestors. Contentment and self satisfaction whether in a single individual or in the leading cities of any town stands for stagnation and stagnation leads to decomposition. We cannot stand still in either thought or action. We must go forward or retrograde and if we are to be of real service to the world and wish to prepare ourselves for the life to come we must above everything be true to ourselves and eager to work for the betterment and uplifting of mankind.

"Real religion is showing our love for God in deeds rather than in words."

NO IMMEDIATE DEMAND FOR MATERIAL WILL FOLLOW WAR

Destroyed Sections Must First Make Something to Buy With.

(Correspondence of Associated Press.)

British Headquarters, France, May 20.—The idea that enormous quantities of material will be immediately in demand to rebuild the destroyed sections of France and Belgium once peace comes seems mistaken.

"We shall not be able to buy many things until we have something to sell which will bring us money to buy with," said a citizen of Ypres, the most ruined of cities and where the wreckage is still pounded by shells.

No civilian inhabitants are allowed to live in the city; but an indication of how reconstruction will begin is evident in the shanties which have been built near the front, often in the zone of shell fire. Boards, discarded oil cans beaten flat, salvaged tiles or bricks and any other kind of material that can be procured at no expense are used to make a shelter for a man and his family.

When the refugee returns to his ruined village or town in the fighting zone his first object will be a roof over his head before he sets out to reclaim acres which have grown up to weeds and are pockmarked with shell holes; or, if he is in business, he will want any kind of temporary premises on the site of his old ulace of business—which he will occupy because it is his and because it is there that his old customers may expect to find him.

The simple wooden houses which the army has built for "rest camps" for the soldiers when out of the trenches will become squatter settlements. Only less amazing than the amount of material which the army will leave behind because it is not worth transporting back to England will be the use of the thrifty French and Belgians will make of it. For up to the very moment of peace, whether it comes this year or five years hence the army must have ample material in reserve for continuing the war.

Lumber, wooden supports for barb wire, timbering for the trenches and dugouts all will be adapted to their necessities by impoverished people who have suffered from the loss of people and enforced idleness. Any funds they have saved will be needed for immediate capital to buy stocks of goods or farm implements and animals. It will probably be years before the permanent buildings will take the place of temporary shelters.

The restoration of such splendid public buildings as the Cloth Hall at Ypres and the Hote de Villa in Arras wil come only when the civic prosperity will permit, unless an indemnity or a government grant is distributed for the purposes. Even in that case the first practical use of money and labor wil be to restore business to something like its normal function.

Oiled paper has been found to be an excellent material for packing tree seedlings, when shipped in crates. When crates are not used, paper-lined burlap makes a particuiarly satisfactory wrapper.

HOW WILMINGTON WOMEN MAY KEEP THEIR HAIR SOFT AND BEAUTIFUL

Dandruff must be removed and the hair roots nourished to stop falling hair and itching scalp. It is unnecessary to have thin, brittle, matted, wispy or faded locks. No matter how unsightly the hair, how badly it is falling, or how much dandruff, Parisian Sage rubbed into the scalp is all that is ever needed. The hair roots are nourished and stimulated to grow new hair, even all dandruff is removed with one application, and itching scalp and falling hair cease; the hair appears more abundant and is always soft, fluffy and radiant with life and beauty.

Parisian Sage, a daintily perfumed liquid, is one of the most pleasant, invigorating and refreshing hair dressings known, yet perfectly harmless and inexpensive. After the first application you will be surprised and delighted with Parisian Sage, for there is nothing that will so help to double your present attractiveness as luxuriant, glorious hair, and this tonic treatment is all that can possibly be desired.

Be sure to get Parisian Sage from R. R. Bellamy, or at any drug or toilet counuter, as there is no other so effective.

DIPLOMAS AWARDED TO TRINITY CLASS OF 86

we have founded an empire such as no conquerer of old ever dreamed of, a republic that is the hope of the oppressed of every land. God's melting-pot, as it were, into which He is throwing all the races of the earth, and by mixing and mingling them, involving His superman of the future. But the greatness of a nation does not consist in mere extent of territory, nor in the strength of battleships alone, but in the purity of its ideals and in the intensity of its devotion to those principles that make for right, that make for justice, that make for the service of mankind throughout the world. True to these principles we shall be the most powerful among all the nations of the earth, but, forsaking these, the time will come when the proudest military engines will be as toys in our hands and our strongest naval armaments will be impotent and useless. In vain will we built battleships, fortify our coasts, and man our guns, unless into every rampart and turret there be brought these ideas and ideals that make the man behind the guns.

"In the opera, Siegfried is pictured as sitting at the mouth of a cavern birds are singing, lights are shimmering, the glory of youth is on him yet he cannot understand what the sounds mean. At length comes the revelation of song and of light, and the hero passes swiftly up 'the heights where, encircled in flame, sleeps th soul of his heart that selfishness which is the real foe of our progress, the heights of achievement will be climbed, and we shall stand face to face with the ideal and the true."

More Gifts From Dukes.

Commemorative of the life of John Flowers and exemplifying the service which his career typified, Trinity College has incorporated into its lectures system a series of lectures entitled, "The John cTyre Lectureship on Christian Citizenship." The lectureship is made possible by the beneficient gift of $5,000 by B. N. Duke. John Flowers was a member of the Trinity College class of 1900 and died in China while answering the call of a missionary. He was a son of Col. G. W. Flowers, county commissioner of Durham, and a prominent citizen. The idea presented by Hon. Joseph W. Folk, in the graduating address yesterday, will be crystalized into working shape by the establishment of this lectureship. The former governor of Missouri correctly appraised the true value of the patriotism of service.

The donation of $10,000 or the equivalent of a well-built landscape garden comprised the other donation toward the upbuilding of Trinity College by the Dukes. The landscape work was provided for by James B. Duke. The stipulations are that the amount donated will be commensurate with the task undertaken. The project will enlist extraordinary efforts to complete the ambitious programme of the Methodist institution to maintain the most symmetrical and beautiful college campus in the South. The stone wall will co-operate toward that end. Evergreens, shrubs and beautiful shade trees will be grouped into a composite scheme for the perfection of the landscape work.

The Methodist institution has attained a supremacy as the richest endowed college in the South, with the possible exception of the Emory University, of Atlanta. The available endowment fund is now $1,595,000. These figures are authentic, as gathered from the office of Treasurer D. W. Newsome. Senator Lee S. Overman said that the Dukes and Bishop Kilgo would be remembered when others would be forgotten. He had in mind the healthy and generous contributions they have donated toward the attainment of this unique supremacy as the best equipped college in the realm of endowed institutions.

The Board of Trustees of Trinity in annual session unantmously re-elected Hon. James H. Southgate, of Durham, president of the board, and Rev. H. F. Marr was re-elected vice-president. Dr. Albert Anderson, of Raleigh, and J. H. Seapark, of Gastonia, were elected members of the board of trustees to supply vacancies due to the deaths of Dr. Bradshaw, of High Point, and J. E. Stagg, of Durham, Rev. J. C. Wooten, presiding elder of the Durham district was placed on the executive committee of the board.

Prof. William H. Pegram, who has been associated with the faculty of Trinity College for forty-odd years, was the recipient of a beautiful loving cup at this commencement as a token of appreciation of Columbia and Hesperian Literary Societies and the college for his unique service as an educator. President W. P. Few presented the cup.

Production and Price

Do the great variety of Sixes and the fluctuating prices seem confusing and perplexing?

Let's reason it out.

What controls price? Production.

As a manufacturer's production increases, his production cost, per car, decreases.

Therefore the plant with the largest production is in a position to give more of everything and charge less for it.

We are the world's largest producers of Six and Four Cylinder Automobiles.

Consequently you get in the Overland Six a larger and more powerful motor—a longer wheelbase—the convenience of electric control buttons on the steering column and an almost endless list of other comforts and refinements.

—yet what is the price?

Not $1200 or $1300 but $1145.

And when it comes to a Six Cylinder performance, remember the Overland Six is the star of them all.

One ride will convince you.

EXTERMINATE THE WEEDS.

State Board of Health Advises Doing Away With Them.

"There are two main reasons," says the State Board of Health, "why weeds should not be allowed to grow up and mature. The first is that the space on which they grow in most cases becomes a dumping ground for refuse and all sorts of filth. Another reason aside from those having to do with health is that they are unsightly and lessen the value of the real estate on which they grow as well as adjoining property. People know that a vacant lot or an alley thick with grown up weeds serves to accumulate all sorts of rubbish and filth, from tin cans to dead cats, and thus becomes a nuisance. Furthermore, they know that it is insanitary, and, therefore, undesirable to have in the neighborhood or even in the town, as for that matter.

"A weed-covered lot or alley becomes a menace to health, chiefly when it becomes a breeding place for flies. This is made possible when garbage and filth are allowed to collect in such places.

"Hay fever is a disease that is hard to cure, and barely less hard to prevent. It is believed to be caused by the pollens of certain plants, such as rag weed, golden rod, yellow dock, cocklebur, careless weed and various grasses. Experiments show that the pollens of these plants so irritate the membranes of the nose as to bring on symptoms of cold, which persist throughout the pollen season. It is best prevented by exterminating weeds and grasses before their flowering season. This can be done by cities and towns, as Asheville is doing for her people, but the plan is hardly practical for individuals alone. However, individuals can go after their town authorities and both can so co-operate as to get rid of weeds and all the evils that are attributed to

PRIMARY A SUCCESS

Heavy Vote Polled in Pender—Second Primary For Sheriff.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Burgaw, N. C., June 10.—The legalized primary in Pender was undoubtedly a success and every Democrat had the opportunity to vote for the man of his choice, and the returns indicate that this was done. Another fact is brought out very prominently in this connection and that is that local interest is more powerful in bringing out the voters than anything else. The fact that in Pender county there was a strong fight between the stock law men and the free rangers served to bring out the voters, and the further fact was demonstrated by the returns that the free rangers were not so largely in the majority as had been supposed. Their candidate for the Senate had only 65 majority and Scott, for the House, had only 28 majority.

The stock law forces captured one commissioner, G. J. Moore, while their candidate for sheriff had only 434 votes out of a total of 1071 cast. There will be a second primary for the nomination for sheriff between O. D. Malpass and R. T. Murray. It is rather remarkable that every candidate on the State ticket received some support. Even Mr. Jones, for Attorney General, got 40 votes and he certainly was a stranger to Pender peolde.

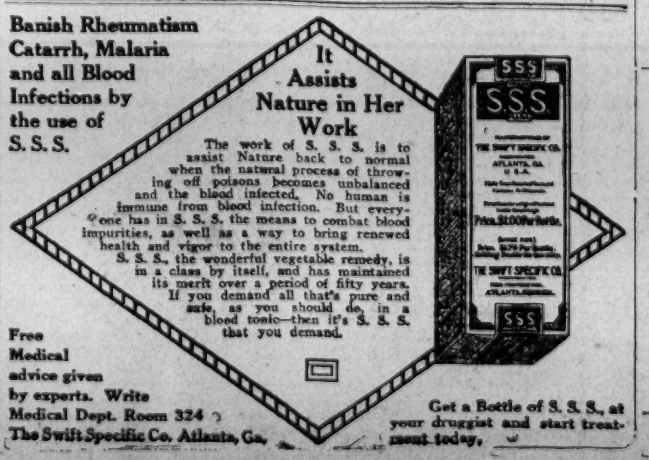

very much gratified at the handsome vote he received in the county, but it was nothing more than he deserved.
